CONDITION ON ADMISSION AND PROGRESS OF CASE

NEUROLOGICAL REPORT--Aug. 1, 1919.

This patient's legs were anaesthetic up to a short time ago, but now he recognises percussion and deep pressure over parts of the legs and feet. It is not clear from X-Ray diagnosis what the track of the bullet was and what damage was done to the vertebrae or to the cord. From the description of hand, however, it seems probable that there was not much actual injury to the cord, but probably hemorrhage into the spinal canal. All reflexes in the lower extremities are abolished. Bed sores have developed on the legs and back. There is much atrophy of the leg and thigh muscles and trophic disturbance of the skin.

Systematic massage of the back and legs, being careful to avoid even slight muscular bruising, should keepthe muscles in moderate tone, so that if some of the spinal function is assumed later on the muscles will be prepared to take on their function.
