Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 --- Upon commencing at 9:15 a.m. on Monday, June 2 7, 1993.

3 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: My name
4 is Maggie Hodgson and I will be your chair over the next 5 day and a half.

6 I would like to introduce Ann Jock who 7 is our elder and who will be saying the opening prayer.

8 Mrs. Jock, please.

9 Opening Prayer

10 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: I would 11 like to thank you, Mrs. Jock, for reminding us that what 12 suicide prevention is really about is the drawing on our 13 natural gifts that the Creator gave us.

14 I would like to ask Mr. René Dusseault
15 to make an opening welcome and also to introduce his fellow 16 Commissioners that are sharing this time with us.

17 Mr. Dusseault, please.

18 CO-CHAIRMAN RENE DUSSEAULT: Thank you.
19 Merci.

20 First, I would like to welcome each and 21 every one of you to this special consultation. As you 22 are aware the Commission has heard a lot of pain and 23 problems in its hearings in the Aboriginal communities

1 during the past year. We have heard a lot as we have 2 travelled across Canada about suicide from many 3 presenters. It is a concern that has been brought up over 4 and over again.

5 The Commission sees suicide as an 6 extremely serious problem. We know it is a difficult one
7 to tackle. We had a round table on health and social issues 8 in Vancouver in mid-March where the issue of suicide was 9 addressed, but only very briefly in one short session.

10 We decided jointly with the Assembly of 11 First Nations, together with Inuit Tapirisat of Canada, 12 the Métis National Council and the Native Council of Canada 13 that we would have special consultations on the issue of 14 suicide in order to try to focus on both the long-term 15 solutions and also the short-term solutions and ways to 16 try to be helpful as soon as possible. We know that there 17 is an urgency. It is a burning issue.

18 As we speak and talk we are going to 19 discuss and focus on this issue during the next day and 20 a half. Communities across the country will have to live 21 with difficult situations and this is an ongoing situation, 22 so we hope to be able to come up with recommendations in 23 an interim fashion as soon as possible after this second

1 part of our special consultation.

2                   Sometime during the summer -- in order 3 to help people in the communities, we will have 4 recommendations that will probably address both 5 governments and Aboriginal leaders. In fact, what we 6 tried to do was put together the experience of people who 7 have worked in this area and who have given thought to 8 it.

9                   There is hope and people are beginning 10 to talk about the reasons for suicide and this is certainly 11 the starting point. The problem of suicide, as you know, 12 is complex and it would be wrong to oversimplify it. It's 13 quite clear that unemployment among the youth is a crucial 14 issue and that a solution is to improve self-esteem, both 15 individually and collectively as part of the solution.

16                  The Royal Commission's mandate is to 17 examine the fundamental issues like self-government and 18 economic development and longer term issues that should 19 help to ease the situation as far as suicide is concerned.

20 We undertook 110 case studies in the communities, many 21 of them dealing with social and cultural aspects. We 22 should be able to get some additional information from 23 those studies as far as suicide is concerned.

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1                   While we hope our final report, that we 2   hope to produce sometime in the fall of 1994, will help
3   to bring some additional hope through long-term solutions
4   to the situation in the communities, we are pretty much 5   aware -- as I said at the outset -- that something has 6   to be done now.

7                   We need an open and frank discussion.
8   We need to hear during this day and a half what has been 9   tried, what has worked and what won't work. The special 10   consultation that we had at the end April with the Assembly 11   of First Nations has produced many recommendations, and 12   a major awareness of the lack of a mental health policy.
13   We understand from those recommendations that there are 14   actions to be taken by governments and also by the 15   communities.

16                  One of the things that we were told is 17   that unless the leadership recognizes the problems before 18   the crisis happens, in a preventive fashion, the underlying 19   factors that cause or are elements in suicide situations, 20   it is difficult to act on. What we were told is that the 21   solutions have to come from the communities. Governments
22   should act as a back-up. External professional people 23   or government people cannot come with solutions. The

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 solutions have to be community designed, and support must 2 be given to those community-designed approaches by 3 government.

4                   These consultations illustrated the 5 need for active participation by parents, educators and 6 also the necessity for youth to talk to other youth, other 7 young people. So, the community participation is 8 essential. Mental health education must be provided.
9 The health services within the communities and the social 10 services have to come up with plans and these plans have 11 to be supported.

12                   The extended family and the community
13 must develop and implement programs. In a blunt fashion 14 it was said that life must be made more attractive than 15 death. It's easier to say, the way to do it is more 16 difficult. We know that suicide is not an Aboriginal 17 problem, it's a problem that crosses all segments of 18 society, but we know that the rate is higher among 19 Aboriginal people in Canada. The Commission is committed 20 to help to the measure that input will be made by everybody 21 concerned.

22                   Again, I would like to welcome
23 everybody. We hope that a very frank and open discussion

1 will take place and that this special consultation dealing 2 with the situation of Inuit people, the situation of the 3 Métis Nation people, but also the Métis in Labrador, the 4 Métis in Eastern Canada, the Maritimes and Quebec will 5 be dealt with, and the situation of people living 6 off-reserve in the cities will be examined.

7                   The problem is there and the solutions
8 are, of course, what everybody is looking at on a preventive 9 path, as much as possible, but there is also elements to 10 be dealt with as far how when there is a crisis and some 11 kind of epidemic situation that develops and how these 12 situations should be handled.

13                   So again, on behalf of all the 14 Commission, I would like to thank you for coming and 15 sharing.

16                   I would like to acknowledge the presence
17 of some Commissioners here this morning. Mary Sillett, 18 who is well known in this room. Mary is an Inuk from 19 Labrador and very concerned with this situation. As you 20 know she was the Vice-President of Inuit Tapirisat, 21 President of Pauktuuit Women's Association for Inuit.

22                   Also here is Bertha Wilson. Madam
23 Wilson is the first woman appointed to the Supreme Court

1 of Canada. She made a tremendous contribution to human 2 rights in this country. She is deeply committed to finding 3 solutions, as are all the other Commissioners.

4 Paul Chartrand will join us later during 5 the day.

6 The other Commissioners won't be able 7 to attend as there were hearings and meetings that have 8 been planned in the western part of Canada and near the 9 border of the U.S. So, Georges Erasmus, in particular, 10 has asked me to convey his best wishes for the success 11 of this day. As you know, Georges and Viola Robinson are 12 very much committed to finding solutions and, in 13 particular, to this difficult issue that we're all involved 14 in.

15 Without further adieu, I would like to 16 turn the microphone over to our facilitator.

17 Thank you very much again for the 18 contribution you are going to make during the next day
19 and a half. Merci.

20 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
21 very much, Mr. Dusseault.

22 I would also like to thank you for being 23 caught off-guard, but I wasn't sure whether all of our

1 other presenters were at the head table and I had to buy
2 a few minutes to check out to see who was here at the head 3 table. So, I thank you for that.

4 The welcoming address for the ITC will 5 be made by Roda Grey.

6 RODA GREY, INUIT TAPIRISAT OF CANADA:

7 (NATIVE LANGUAGE)

8 I'm going to speak in two languages.

9 I'm Inuk from the North, but I work in 10 Ottawa. I work for Pauktuuit Inuit -- as the health 11 coordinator, but I am presented by ITC. I wanted to make 12 sure you understand that. ITC is like a father 13 organization and we work closely.

14 First of all, I would like to thank the 15 Royal Commission who have given us this opportunity to 16 have Inuit people come down south for this exciting event.

18 When there is an exciting event I worry
19 about my grandfather. My grandfather is not in this room, 20 but I am aware that if you say that you find this an exciting 21 event that the purpose of this is not for the exciting 22 event because suicide and youth is not exciting.

23 To me the exciting part is that the

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on

1 people like yourselves on the Royal Commission, ITC and 2 the other organizations in the world are starting to 3 recognize that they have to do something about that. That 4 kind of action is very exciting for me because we are 5 looking for solutions. There is no single solution to 6 stop suicides -- I'm telling you we have a long way to 7 go and we are doing something about it. That is really 8 the exciting part.

9 (NATIVE LANGUAGE)

10 The last message I would like to make 11 is that I was a little bit troubled when I was told that 12 we could invite eight Inuit people. We have 53 Inuit 13 communities in the north. I want everybody to know that.
14 I always tell that to other people, that we have 53 Inuit
15 communities.

16 I would like to have had those Inuit 17 people represented from 53 communities, but I also have 18 to realize that the reality is that it's not possible to 19 have 53 Inuit coming to this workshop to learn what to 20 do about suicide. So, I am really grateful that I have 21 more than 8 Inuit in this room. And, speaking for the 22 Inuit people -- I'm sure that our First Nations felt that 23 way too because you have many many communities and 1 especially small communities.

2 (NATIVE LANGUAGE).

3 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
4 very much, Roda.

5 Because we started a little late I would 6 like to ask each presenter, if they could, to keep it as 7 close to approximately two minutes, as possible. Now, 8 that we have had the women speak Mr. Nelson Mayer will 9 be speaking for the Native Council of Canada.

10 NELSON MAYER, NATIVE COUNCIL OF CANADA:

11 Thank you, Maggie.

12 It's always difficult to put a 13 microphone in front of a politician and say, "You only 14 have two minutes to speak." I will try.

15 Our National President of the Native
16 Council of Canada, Ron George, is presently leading a 17 caravan that has left Vancouver on July 4th and is 18 travelling to Ottawa, so he is unable to be here this 19 morning to provide a welcoming address.

20 I have spoken to the National 21 Vice-President, Mr. Phil Fraser, who was slated to be here 22 this morning and make the opening address and welcome to 23 all of the workshop participants. Unfortunately, he too

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 is on the highway, but he is stuck in a traffic jam with 2 some truck that has rolled over.

3 I spoke to him on his cellular and he 4 has asked me to convey the wishes of the Native Council
5 of Canada for a successful workshop to the participants 6 and a special welcome to all of the delegates and other 7 people from the Native Council of Canada's list, as well
8 as the other lists. It is you from the community level 9 who have been selected, based upon your expertise, to come 10 up with your thoughts and ideas through the proceedings 11 here on what the solutions are for our people, whether 12 it is within an Inuit community, a Métis community on 13 reserve level, or for us who reside in the urban area.

14 A significant amount of work, we 15 recognize, has already been done and still needs to be 16 done in addressing the solutions to the high rate of 17 suicides amongst our Aboriginal population, and most 18 particularly the youth.

19 So, on behalf of our national leadership 20 and the Native Council of Canada, we thank the Royal 21 Commission for the opportunity to express the urban 22 viewpoint regarding suicides, prevention, intervention, 23 crisis intervention as well post-trauma aftercare.

1 I would like to thank Maggie Hodgson and 2 I would like to thank the elder, Ann Jock, for providing 3 our opening prayer. Thank you very much. We look forward 4 to a very good workshop and you will hear our presentations
5 on our participation.

6 Thank you.

7 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON:

8 For those people who are little cold,
9 there's some good news and some bad news. The bad news 10 is that it's still cold in here, but the good news is that 11 if you go to the bathroom the bathrooms are all really 12 heated. So, if you start suffering from hypothermia just 13 go to the bathroom and warm up.

14 The next speaker is Joey Hamelin from 15 the MNCW.

16 Joey, please.

17 JOEY HAMELIN, METIS NATIONAL COUNCIL:

18 Good morning, conference delegates, and thank you Elder 19 Jock for your heart-warming prayer.

20 On behalf of the Métis National Council
21 I would like to thank the Royal Commission on Aboriginal 22 Peoples for including and inviting the Métis Nation as 23 equal partners throughout this entire process.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1                   Suicide is a serious problem for the 2   Aboriginal peoples of Canada. I think today I agree that 3   we have to look beyond the symptoms of suicide, we must 4   look at the causes. When we look at the causes through 5   that process we must develop our short-term and long-term 6   strategies and come up with some firm recommendations that 7   we can take back to our communities. We must look at some 8   unique models that we can experiment with or that we can 9   present to our communities and hopefully reduce the number 10  of people that complete suicide.

11                  I would just like to briefly mention 12  Richard Cardinal, many of you may be familiar with his 13  suicide. He was a young Métis boy from Fort Chipoyain
14  (PH) in northern Alberta. On June 24, 1984 he completed
15  suicide. He lived in 22 foster homes, was assigned 26 16  social workers. Richard was reaching out and we never 17  -- the community, the child welfare authorities and the 18  various systems didn't listen or didn't hear Richard in 19  his attempt to reach out for someone to care about him, 20  love him and give him some hope.

21                  It has been nine years since this tragic 22  incident, but out of this tragic incident was the Thomason
23  (PH) Report which came up with a number of recommendations.

1                   There is another case in Manitoba,
2   Lester Desjeurlais, that also -- from these particular 3   cases that received this national and provincial 4   recognition -- we must now look at what has happened since 5   that time.

6                   We must now, through our respective 7   organizations, take action. It is our responsibility from 8   the community level, and also as technicians, and also 9   our political leadership must now take the issue of suicide 10  prevention seriously. It is as equally important as the 11  Constitution. Without taking care of our children and 12  our youth then it makes it harder to be united and strong 13  as a Nation.

14                  I thank you on behalf of the Métis
15  National Council. It is a pleasure for me to participate 16  throughout this process. I don't know how long that took, 17  but thank you.

18                  MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
19  very much, Joey.

20                  For the Native Women's Association of 21  Canada, Jane Gottfriedson.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1   ASSOCIATION OF CANADA: Good morning, everyone. Ladies, 2 gentlemen, elders and especially Ann Jock who opened the 3 day with a special prayer.

4                               Thank you.

5                               I think it's really important that -- 6 I guess, on behalf of the Women's Association and the women 7 across the country, this is a very important issue. It's 8 something that we are trying to grapple and work with.
9 It's important that a dialogue begin, we need to talk about 10 this issue.

11                              It not only affects the family directly 12 of someone who commits suicide, but the whole community
13 is impacted. It's really devastating and it takes, it 14 seems forever, to come to grips with a situation like that.

15                              We are always looking for solutions, 16 innovative ideas, different ways of helping and trying 17 to watch for the signs. That needs to be brought to the 18 communities because sometimes these young people -- and 19 in my community we have had elders commit suicide and the 20 signs have always been there, but if you don't know what 21 to look for you lose these people.

22                              I wish all of you success in the 23 workshops and I'm looking forward to seeing the

June 7, 1993

1 recommendations, ideas and thoughts that come forward.
2 We are, at the present time, working on a major suicide 3 project so a lot of this workshop is timely and it will 4 help us in our communities when we go to our perspective 5 homes.

6 Thank you.

7 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
8 very much, Jane.

9 I was asked to do a keynote, however I'm 10 going to try to just make a few short remarks because we 11 want to allocate a little bit more time after coffee break 12 for discussion and for an opportunity for each one of the 13 groups to present a particular project that seems to be 14 working in their community.

15 My first involvement in the area of 16 suicide prevention on a national basis was in 1984. Health 17 and Welfare Canada sponsored a national training set on 18 suicide prevention. I was one of the trainers for that 19 training set. There were 40 people from across Canada 20 brought together.

21 At that time there were certain 22 assumptions made about suicide prevention. Since that 23 time there are a number of things that I've been able to

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 look back and look at differently.

2                   The three elements in the area of suicide 3 prevention that it is important that we look at is the 4 process of incorporating respect, relevance and 5 reciprocity. Respect, that Mr. Dusseault talked about, 6 and each one of the speakers talked about with regard to 7 respect for regional differences, cultural differences
8 and size of community. The relevance of the strategies 9 that are adopted by each community suited to their 10 particular needs and finally, the process of reciprocity.

11                  I think that the opportunity and what's 12 already happening is where there is already a process of 13 giving and receiving, so that we both benefit and so that 14 we both learn in the process.

15                  I come from the field of training, as 16 some of you know, so I'm going to talk about what I know 17 best as it relates to training in the area of human 18 services.

19                  One of the difficulties that has existed
20 for the NADAP Program, for the friendship centres across 21 Canada, for the CHR Program and the different health 22 services across Canada has been a challenge of how to access 23 adequate resources to deliver training in the human

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 services field, and in this case, suicide prevention.

2 Suicide prevention, as you know, and you
3 are going to be talking about, is part of family violence, 4 it's part of parenting, and it's part of the health 5 intervention field generally. When people are being 6 trained what seems to happen is that they identify a 7 program, whatever that program is, with some face of 8 suicide prevention. Then they go about trying to identify 9 resources to deliver the training. Each group experiences 10 difficulty in doing that.

11 However, I think that there is an 12 opportunity, an opportunity that we could look at. The 13 opportunity is looking at resources outside of the health 14 field itself, resources within Canada Employment and 15 Immigration through CEIC.

16 If there was a national labour market
17 analysis done in the health field for the Métis people, 18 Native women, Inuit people and the Assembly of First 19 Nations and the different groups, and out of that national 20 labour market analysis, if that was conducted by Canada
21 Employment and Immigration, then it would provide us data 22 and it would provide the federal government data in which 23 they, in turn, could re-prioritize some of the existing

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 resources within Canada Employment and Immigration.

2                   For example, right now because of the 3 economics of the situation we don't need a lot of cat 4 skimmers, you know. There are a number of people who are 5 involved in the trades now and there is funding allocated 6 for the trades. If they could look at re-prioritizing 7 and moving some of the monies out of the areas that have 8 been cut back because of the economics of Canada, and then 9 in turn each respective organization and the community
10 organizations could apply for those funds to deliver 11 training in the human services and the health field, 12 specifically in this case, suicide prevention regionally 13 -- of course, that would require some coordination and 14 some cooperation between those two departments.

15                   However, one of the things that we do 16 know -- there is data that we do know and that is that 17 people in the human services field are retained, but they 18 may not be retained in the specific field that they were 19 hired into. An example, community health representatives
20 stay in their jobs say an average of five years. The NADAP
21 workers stay in their job an average of two and a half 22 years. Where do those workers go? They move into more 23 senior management positions and leadership positions.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on

1                   All of the old CHR's are leaders right
2 across Canada. So, we are retaining them in the labour 3 market. It is not a one-shot deal. We must train our 4 workers in the area of suicide prevention right now. It
5 must be a minimum of a 10 year investment of a cooperative
6 effort between CEC and Health and Welfare Canada.

7                   Then, I believe, we could look at the 8 expansion and the development of the process of 9 reciprocity, where our communities could receive back the 10 benefits. I will just give you an example of one small 11 region in Canada. There are 196 health workers in this 12 one small region. Twenty of those workers are trained.
13 There was a report that was commissioned by the federal 14 government that said that they needed another 150 workers
15 in that area. Do they need another 150 workers, or do 16 they need the 176 that they have that are untrained provided 17 training?

18                   Is training the only solution? No, but 19 I believe that training in the health field has generally 20 been a community development strategy and that has 21 manifested itself and been proven. For example, in our 22 organization 47 per cent of our graduates have moved into 23 management and leadership positions within five years.

1 Then those people start setting social policy.

2 The challenge I think that we have, and 3 I know that we have as an agency, is how can we influence 4 government policy so that they in turn can be more creative 5 to address the recommendations that are going to be put 6 forward by the Royal Commission and by our communities 7 in this time of restraint?

8 Thank you very much.

9 The next speaker that I would like to 10 invite to speak is Rheena Diabo. Rheena was one of our 11 suicide prevention trainees in 1984. In 1984 she was a 12 bit of a trouble maker on that training set. She is from 13 Kahnawake, you know, and trouble maker not in a negative 14 sense, but in an energetic sense, in a stimulating sense 15 and in a challenging sense. She has taken all of those 16 attributes and continued to develop and has been involved 17 in the post-trauma work that was done with Kahnawake after 18 the Oka crisis.

19 RHEENA DIABO, SHAKOTIIA'TAKEHANES

20 COMMUNITY SERVICES: First of all I would like to thank 21 the organizers for inviting me, the Commission, and our 22 elder, Nistah (PH) Yamagohah (PH). In our traditions we 23 don't have words for aunt or grandmother. The word in

1 our language is mother and all our female relations have 2 that title. So, I feel really supported this morning
3 having one of them here with me.

4 When I was contacted to come and speak
5 to the assembly I sort of negotiated because what they 6 wanted me to come in and talk about was post-trauma work.

7 I said I would do it, but I have to tie in worker wellness 8 because I think the two are very connected. So that was 9 agreed to and I'm hoping to pull those two things together 10 for everybody this morning.

11 As Maggie indicated, my work in the area 12 of suicide started in 1984 with that conference. At that 13 time how we were invited to participate in the conference 14 is that we were contacted by regional offices and they 15 said there was a national workshop going on in Toronto 16 and could we please attend.

17 Of course I had just had a couple of weeks
18 training in the area and had done maybe two interventions 19 at that point, so I was really interested in getting that 20 type of support that I felt could happen at a national 21 workshop. So, we attended. Much to my dismay, the very 22 first morning of the workshop they introduced us to the 23 participants as the specialists in the field.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1                   So, for the first three days of the 2 workshop we functioned under a lot of pressure and by 3 Wednesday morning I was feeling quite oppressed, having 4 to live up to this title of being a specialist in the field
5 of suicide. I decided to disclose at that point and I 6 said, "I feel really uncomfortable about being here, being 7 titled a specialist. I have basically six weeks training 8 and I've actually only done two interventions. I don't 9 know if that qualifies me as a specialist." It had a ripple 10 effect because what happened was the 40 other participants 11 sort of shared the same thing.

12                   I don't know if there are specialists 13 in the field. I think sometimes our titles get in our 14 way, like I'm a Therapeutic Intervention Facilitator.
15 Now, if I told my grandmother that she would say, "That's 16 nice, but how are your kids?" They put you back into 17 perspective.

18                   I think sometimes, working in the field, 19 that titles tend to also oppress us. We have to be careful 20 of that. So, when we're looking at worker wellness what 21 we actually have to do is look at our responsibilities.

22

23                   I was told by an elder that we don't have

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 rights, we have responsibilities. The Creator gives them
2 to us, we are born with them and then we have our lifetimes
3 to carry them out.

4 As workers in the field working with 5 other human beings, I guess our responsibility is to 6 connect with these people and at some point in time try 7 to help them facilitate their healing.

8 The hard part about that is that 9 responsibility carries with it a high degree of power, 10 actually. I mean if I asked you to all stand up and close 11 your eyes for five minutes because you thought it was part 12 of what I had to do you would actually do it. So, I have 13 a lot of power in working with people. A lot of times 14 our workers I don't think honour that in a good way and 15 as a result their own wellness becomes impacted.

16 I'm coming to believe more and more that 17 in the field of intervention, whether it be suicide or 18 family violence, what workers need to do is start looking 19 at their own wellness and how you function, where you're 20 coming from and as you work with other people how that 21 work touches on you and what it creates within you and 22 have some form of support in order to work things through.

23 I usually recommend for people who

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on

1 cannot have their own clinical supervisors, because that 2 is not a reality in Indian communities, is that you do
3 peer supervision with each other. There is training
4 available for people to learn how to do that. The thing 5 to do is hook yourself up with a good mentor or elder who 6 can put you in touch with the reality of being a human 7 being, which is what a worker needs to do when things are 8 getting out of hand.

9                   My experience started in the CHR Program
10 and from there I graduated into alcohol and drug abuse
11 and from there I graduated in social services. So, I guess 12 you would call me an upwardly mobile Mohawk.

13                   In 1990, when the crisis hit our 14 community, that was my first real experience with trauma 15 in itself. I had been working with people who had various 16 degrees of unwellness in the community, but until that 17 point I had never tended to look at things from a traumatic 18 point of view.

19                   One of the events that did it for me is 20 I was responsible for the coordination of the evacuation.

21 We evacuated approximately 2,500 people from our 22 community. So, our services had to split, half staying 23 in the community and half staying out.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on

1                   The incident that stays in my mind was 2 the incident of the rock throwing -- the stoning of the 3 caravan. What was really interesting is that when we were 4 functioning at the hotel preparing workers daily to meet
5 with these people who were evacuating, we were doing a 6 lot of debriefing with people coming off the boats and 7 through the cars and then from there relocating them and 8 hooking them up with resources elsewhere. Therefore, it 9 became very traumatizing to us in the course of preparing 10 that day because we knew the caravan was coming over.

11                  All of a sudden -- because we were using 12 the television to monitor a lot of the situations that 13 were happening in the community, we saw this event actually 14 taking place and knew that within minutes those people 15 would be at our door step and we would have to respond 16 to their needs.

17                  In order for us to do that -- and I need 18 to remind people here that we had grandmothers, 19 grandfathers, uncles, aunts, brothers and sisters, sons 20 and daughters in that caravan -- the workers who were 21 preparing to receive those people. In order to meet their 22 needs what we had to do was suppress those things we 23 witnessed and the feelings we were feeling in order to

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 be there for them, not realizing at the time what we were 2 doing.

3                   What happened is in October we started
4 debriefing sessions for our staff and we were fortunate 5 to pull in some very good support people who started working 6 with the staff on debriefing sessions. In the course of 7 those debriefing sessions we started to come to realize 8 how much the workers had been traumatized by these events, 9 in that they experienced the trauma by witnessing it and 10 then having to not deal with the energy created by the 11 feelings that were made, pushing them down in order to 12 respond to somebody else's needs.

13                   I started making the connection because 14 I realized as we were going through this that quite often 15 I had to do this on a regular basis when I had to do a 16 suicide intervention. It pulled feelings within me 17 because the other reality in working in our communities 18 is we work with relatives, friends, relatives of friends.
19

20                   So there is a lot of pressure put on you 21 to respond and to intervene in a good way because you know
22 damn well if you are not successful what the consequences 23 are going to be. They're going to be towards people that

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 you know and care about and that is really hard. That's 2 another reality of Indian country.

3                   At that time I actually had a flashback
4 because I remembered doing an intervention. I had worked 5 in a local youth centre so I had a good connection with 6 a lot of young people who had grown up, were getting 7 married, and gone on to their own relationships.

8                   So, as an on-call worker I was called 9 in one weekend by our police and I had to do an intervention
10 with a young woman who had two children. She was six months 11 pregnant. It was February. It was below zero weather.

12 Her husband had come home -- I don't know if you're 13 familiar with the iron work trade, but we have a tool called 14 a spud wrench. It's quite a large piece of iron. Anyway, 15 her husband had gone home under the influence and battered 16 her with this spud wrench and then threw her out of the 17 house and locked the door at 4 o'clock in the morning.
18 The two children had witnessed that.

19                   So I was called to intervene and had to 20 work with this woman for the next couple of weeks to try 21 and do some support work with the children who had been 22 traumatized by this event. What became really interesting 23 to me in our debriefing sessions in 1990 is I recognized

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 that I had been traumatized by having to do that 2 intervention because I knew the woman, I knew the things
3 that she had experienced because I felt for her, but I 4 had to suppress my feelings and how I felt about the 5 perpetrator in order to be able to effectively deal with 6 the community.

7                   One of the things -- 1990 was a 8 horrendous year for us in some respects, but out of it 9 a lot of healing is going to come out for my community 10 because we came to terms with our humanity, we came to 11 terms with ourselves as workers and we are confronting 12 things and issues we had to address. So, as a result we 13 have been forced to look at our own wellness.

14                   I think one of the important things is 15 that if you don't deal with this energy, these feelings 16 that are created and you keep suppressing it, you suppress 17 a high degree of work energy that makes you even less 18 functional. Maybe you can do more advocacy, more public 19 speaking, more self-development and because you're not 20 doing that you are not honouring the gifts the Creator
21 has given you, of which wellness is one of them, as well 22 as the other skills that he has chosen to provide us with.

23                   The other thing, too, is you provide role

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 modelling for your community because if you're not prepared
2 to lead the way and do what you are expecting your people
3 to do then I don't think we've honoured them very well 4 as interventionists.

5                   So, when I talk about worker wellness 6 I talk about us being role models for the community in 7 our own healing and taking those first steps to first deal 8 with our issues in a good way, seeking therapy when it's 9 necessary, recognizing that when we deal with traumatic 10 events that there is a debriefing process that needs to 11 happen and looking to provide supervision for ourselves 12 so that in times of crisis that we are supported as well.

13                   I guess with that I will turn the floor
14 back over to Maggie and thank you for your attention.

15                   MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: I would 16 like to open the floor for questions of Rheena with regard 17 to the post-trauma work that was done with Khanawake or 18 any comments, please.

19                   If you could go up to the microphone and 20 identify yourself and then put forward your question.

21                   We will have a few minutes to do that 22 and then we'll go to coffee. Hopefully, we will be back 23 on schedule.

1 Marlene, please.

2 MARLENE CASTALANO: Marlene Castalano
3 from the Royal Commission.

4 Rheena, as you were talking I was 5 realizing very powerfully how the professionalism of 6 Aboriginal people working with our own relatives and 7 friends in our communities, it's often cited, talk about 8 training as a problem that we're on call 24 hours a day
9 and related to everybody. You have put it in a different 10 sense about becoming aware of what's going on and turning 11 that into a strength.

12 I'm wondering, is there in the training 13 opportunities that you are aware of -- is this being built 14 into the professional use of self, the creative use of 15 self and relationships in that unique Aboriginal 16 environment? Is that being built into training?

17 RHEENA DIABO: First of all, I'm not 18 familiar with all the training that's going on, I can just 19 share from my experience of the programs that I've been 20 involved in.

21 Not, I would say, in the last 10 years
22 across the country have I seen much of it happening, but 23 I am aware that Maggie does some within the Nichi (PH)

1 components. When I go out and do training in communities
2 I do address some of that, whether it's on suicide, family 3 violence or whatever. I think the reality is that we 4 haven't been confronted with that before.

5 I was sharing with Maggie that it's been 6 my experience, and it's really an amazing thing that I 7 see happening, is that a lot of us who play what you'd 8 call key roles in Indian country and the healing areas 9 have been confronted on a personal level with some very 10 heavy duty major issues in the last year and a half.

11 So, we've been actually forced to walk
12 our talk and to explore how we've been approaching things 13 because, you know, you're quite content when you're doing 14 it for somebody else, but when you all of a sudden have 15 to do it, it puts a different light on things. I think 16 that that is what's happening in most Indian communities 17 is people who are working in the area of healing have 18 started to walk their own talk and by doing that have had 19 to look at establishing boundaries for responsibility.

20 As I said earlier, the Creator gave us 21 responsibilities. My responsibility is to intervene to 22 a certain point, but you also have the responsibility as 23 a client to meet me half way. So, I think more and more

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 one of the things that will happen is we are going to connect 2 more and more with our spiritual components because 3 responsibility is highly tied into the spiritual aspect 4 of healing.

5 RODA GREY: I have a question for you.
6 Sorry I'm short, do you see my face? I'm a real Inuk.

7 I have a question: Do you ever come 8 across that training to teach you Native -- like for the 9 Inuit, we will always have trouble with the lack of 10 confidence in ourselves. I think we were taught that if 11 white people can do it then we can do it. When it comes 12 to social workers, nurses and doctors -- there is no doctor 13 in the north, no nurses, there are some social workers
14 now, but we don't have people -- I have never ever come 15 across an Inuk telling me, "I am confident, I can do it."

16 There are Inuit people in the north who 17 are trying to teach about AIDS or sexual abuse, but they 18 also ask me, "Did I speak okay? Was the message okay?"

19 They do not have that kind of confidence. I always wanted 20 there to be some kind of training for us to learn how to 21 be confident, just like white people, because a lot of 22 white women have so much confidence. They have university 23 degrees. They have much training and they have

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 confidence. They have beautiful homes and they are 2 beautiful. They don't have any trouble with themselves
3 like we do coming from the -- families. We are trying 4 to do some work and we have our doubts.

5                   When I'm going to make a speech, I'm 6 always thinking, "I wonder how I could do it and have that 7 kind of confidence." I think it's really neat. That's 8 my opinion.

9                   Thank you.

10                   RHEENA DIABO: I no longer approach 11 things like that from a competency perspective because 12 competency is what gets in the way of your confidence 13 because you're always wondering if you're competent enough 14 to do something and that influences your confidence.

15                   Again, I have to thank an elder who put 16 it into perspective for me. Whenever I come to do 17 presentations like this or training or I'm asked to speak, 18 I focus on the ethic or the place of responsibility. I 19 think that word is not used enough and it has such a wealth
20 of meaning and it can be such a support. So, when I do 21 something I don't look at how well I'm going to do it, 22 I look at it more like I will try to do it to the best 23 of my ability, but that it is the responsible thing to

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 do.

2 Our elder identified this morning that 3 we were meant to be here. So there is a reason why I was 4 asked. He knows what the reason is so I have to respect
5 and honour that and in doing so I just act from a responsible 6 area. I find if I do it that way, if I put myself in the 7 head space of "this is the responsible thing to do", then 8 the issue of competency or confidence doesn't get in the 9 way of getting my point across and really connecting with 10 people.

11 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Rheena
12 looks at that from a philosophical standpoint.

13 One of the practical things that I think 14 needs to happen in our communities is that we need to invite 15 our own people to speak to us. We need to have our people 16 be involved as co-facilitators in workshops.

17 One teacher I had said, "If you want 18 to learn how to write, write. If you want to learn how 19 to talk, talk." If you look at yourself and the more you 20 talk the more confidence you develop in the process.

21 Often our communities look to the white 22 outside experts or Indian outside experts. When we have 23 people who have resources and who can have something to

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 share with us from the community level, we have to help
2 support them and hold them up and encourage them in small 3 ways and help them to build.

4 I think what Marlene was saying that are 5 greatest strength is our greatest potential weakness -- 6 we have to know what our strengths are -- and that's from 7 people in our community -- and consistently do that.

8 What amazes me is that we're willing to 9 pay white consultants $1000 a day and they can make any 10 kind of mistakes during workshop that they want just 11 because we pay them $1000 a day. If we invite our community 12 people to do a workshop and they make mistakes then we 13 shouldn't have invited her because she doesn't know that 14 much anyway.

15 RHEENA DIABO: Maggie has just asked me
16 to address a bit about post-trauma resources and maybe 17 share a bit with the people on how we responded after the 18 1990 crisis. Of course, no community plans for such an 19 event when they're developing you as a CHR, NADAP or social 20 worker and you're not trained to respond to that type of 21 activity.

22 So, in September of 1990 after the 23 barricades came down, one of the things we had to look

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 at was how are we going to respond to the community because 2 we knew damn well they were in crisis.

3 One of the things I would like to add
4 here is that I have a really strong belief that had things 5 not happened the way they had in our community, where are 6 young people were allowed to project their anger outwards, 7 we would have had an epidemic of suicides among our young 8 men because they were sitting on a lot of anger and they 9 needed to respond in some way and so they chose the 10 barricades.

11 Now, the sad part about this is our 12 spiritual and elder people did not support the violent 13 use and methods because according to our traditions we 14 are operating under what is called a Great Law of Peace.

15 After the barricades came down the thing
16 we had to contend with was that they had gotten their anger 17 out, but in doing so had gone against some of our basic 18 traditions. So, they had to sort of disconnect and we 19 had to respond to that, as well as to the workers. We 20 didn't know how we were going to do it or what we were 21 going to do, we just knew that the community was in crisis.

22 Fortunately, a person from Ottawa called 23 us and identified that Medical Services has what they call

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 Emergency Services Funding and it is open to the whole 2 of the country, and it's specific to communities whether 3 you're Indian or non-Indian. The purpose of these monies
4 is to help communities respond to events that happen
5 outside the normal range of what you'd call normal events.

6                   The monies are usually tied into more 7 natural disasters like floods, tornados, hurricanes and 8 such, but they have also been used more recently for 9 environmental accidents where you have toxic spills, like 10 in Quebec where they had Ste. Basil Le Grande where you 11 had a tire refuse yard burn up and the community had to 12 be evacuated.

13                   So, what happened is one of our 14 psychologists who actually lives in the area was aware 15 of services they received and we did a little bit of 16 research and found out where we could go for the monies.
17 We put together a proposal for a two-year period and 18 submitted it and we were able to get -- I'm not quite sure, 19 I think it's approximately $500,000 for a two-year period 20 to bring in additional resources to respond to the 21 aftermath.

22                   What we did was once we had the monies 23 verified then we had a couple of strategy sessions on where

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 we were going to utilize our own resources. We had to 2 look at getting the workers taken care of and see if we 3 had to hire additional workers while we were giving some 4 workers time off, because also within the two-year period
5 following 1990 we had several of our staff take extended 6 leaves of absence for their own wellness because of what 7 they had to respond to during the crisis.

8 As well as that, we brought in these high 9 priced consultants that Maggie was talking about and ---

10 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Don't 11 look at me when you say that.

12 RHEENA DIABO: She offered to come for 13 free.

14 I have to say at this point that there
15 are some that are good, but you have to do your homework.
16 You have to negotiate and you have to know what you're 17 looking for when you bring these people in. You have to 18 also let them know that you're calling the shots, that 19 these are your people so you are going to structure what 20 you want the intervention to look like. Basically, there 21 has to be a high degree of responsibility with whoever 22 organizes this.

23 So, there are funds available through

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 Health and Welfare, but there has to be a lot of 2 pre-planning before your proposal goes in and a lot of 3 planning afterwards because, of course, the proposal you 4 send in never gets fully funded so you have to make some 5 adjustments and adaptations to it.

6 I guess that's about it.

7 Are there any other areas?

8 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: I'm going 9 to close the floor to questions and have one presentation 10 that is going to cut a bit into the coffee break time, 11 but we're only about 10 minutes behind at this point, 12 Myrtle, is that okay with you?

13 I only look like I'm the boss. The real 14 boss is at the back of the room.

15 We had asked the different groups to have 16 a representative speak about a particular project in the 17 area of suicide prevention and wellness or intervention 18 from their particular jurisdiction.

19 The first group that I would like to ask
20 to speak is the Native Women's Association.

21 Bev Julian, please. If you would like 22 to come up.

23 I'm from B.C., so I am really happy when

June 7, 1993

1 we have B.C. Indians presenting. So, I'm particularly 2 pleased that you were able to come, Bev.

3 BEV JULIAN, NATIVE WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION
4 OF CANADA: Good morning, everyone. Welcome elder.

5 Thank you for your prayer this morning, it was beautiful.

6 I guess where I'll start out this morning
7 is to kind of give you a little background of who I am 8 and the type of work I do.

9 I started working as a community health
10 rep in 1979 and worked for 11 years. I did a lot of work 11 -- I went into training for suicide prevention, which 12 was very difficult for me because I had lost a sister in 13 1980, and I had a very hard time accepting that. I raised 14 her son who was 14 months old and he is now 13. So, I 15 have an everyday reminder of my younger sister.

16 Since then, I have lost a niece, a nephew
17 and a cousin through suicide, so it has been very difficult 18 for me to be able to work with suicide prevention.

19 I am also a traditional healer. It's 20 another difficult project to work with because when you 21 are related to somebody that close and you love them dearly, 22 it's hard to work with them and you can't see what's going 23 on with them, but it's hard to work with them.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on

1                   Last year, one of my nieces was 2   attempting suicide and I had to go all the way to North
3   Van to pick her up with her mother and her mother's mate.
4   The mother and the mate started to scold her about the 5   attempt that she was trying and I sat in the back seat
6   with her and I never said a word. I just held her hand
7   all the way to Abbotsford. Then when we arrived there 8   they brought her into the hospital and the doctor spoke 9   to her and they called me in to listen. I did. From there 10   I picked up how I could work with her for the rest of the 11   journey home.

12                   At that time I didn't know what I was 13   going to say at all and then I just held her in my arms 14   and I talked to her all the way to my house. I asked her 15   if she was going to be okay and she said, "Yes, she would 16   promise she wouldn't do anything." So, that started me 17   off into suicide prevention as a healer. I finally figured 18   out a way that I could work with somebody that close to 19   me.

20                   Over the past years I've had a lot of 21   healing to do within myself to be able to do this kind 22   of work.

23                   I'm a traveller. I go all over the place

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 and I work in Tofino (PH) and Port Alberni and all through 2 Canada. I have just been on the road. I carry a suitcase 3 all the time and drive my car wherever I can drive it to 4 to try and help the people.

5 In one of the areas I worked with a Native 6 man who attempted suicide and they asked me to go into 7 the hospital to work with him. I went in there. It was 8 a lot easier to work with somebody I didn't know at all 9 because I had the heart and the feeling for him, yet I 10 didn't know who he was.

11 When I walked into the room this man had 12 very thin eyes. You couldn't see the white part of his 13 eyes. All you could see was the brown and it was very 14 shallow and dark. He looked very grey. This man had shot 15 himself through the chest and it missed his heart and his 16 lung and went right through.

17 When I started to work with him he 18 wouldn't talk to me very much and when I did my healing 19 work with him I asked him how he felt inside, if he felt 20 empty and like rubber. He said, "Yes". I said, "Okay".
21

22 I finished working with him to take all
23 the pain away and when I finished that then I started

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 working on getting his spirit back, because that showed 2 me that his spirit was gone with the shallowness of his 3 eyes.

4 I was standing there holding his 5 shoulders and praying that the spirit would come back, 6 when it started to enter him I could see it coming in and 7 when it reached so far, he would say, "I can feel it."
8 When it went a little farther, he said, "I can feel it."

9 When he yelled really loud, "I can feel it", I let him 10 go and we were finished working with him to heal his spirit.

11 I couldn't talk to him after because 12 every time I said anything he would just burst out laughing.

13 He felt so good inside. When he opened his eyes you could 14 really see the whites of his eyes. It was a good feeling 15 for me that I had brought this man back together in that 16 little while.

17 When I went to his reserve about a month
18 later, he just waved at me. They say when they mention 19 my name he starts laughing. So, it really did work for 20 him. I kind of believe that this man will probably be 21 one of your most important suicide prevention workers in 22 a few months or a year or so because he has gone through 23 it. I think he will be one of the top workers. I'm hoping

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 that my intuitions will work.

2                   There were a couple of teenagers that 3 I worked with in Seabert (PH) Island and they were 4 attempting suicide because they were young lovers and they 5 split up and they couldn't make ends meet. They were both 6 on the borderline.

7                   It was my first day filling in for this 8 drug and alcohol counsellor. They came to me and they 9 said, "You have two people you have to see today and they 10 are both suicide attempts." I thought, "Oh, my gosh, what 11 am I going to do here?" I sat there and said a few prayers 12 and then I went in and listened to their story.

13                   I explained to them that if they decided 14 to take their lives at that time they would have to work 15 on the other side because they wouldn't know where they 16 were going. They would have to continue their work to 17 help the spirits on the other side. I said, "I sat down 18 and listened to people who have had dreams and have dreamt 19 about people that have passed away. I believe in those 20 dreams because I believe that those people will come back 21 and tell you where they are and how they are doing and 22 what they have to do."

23                   When I explained this to this young

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 couple they just sat there and looked at me for a long
2 time and they started crying. When I had them crying I
3 knew that I had the best part of them again. I have seen 4 the girl a few times and she just waves and smiles and 5 walks by me, but the boy I haven't seen him since, but 6 he is still around with us and going to school. So, I 7 guess I came across with him as well.

8 I guess what I'm trying to get across 9 is that workshops are very important to our people. Like 10 my sister's son who committed suicide, she was really 11 having a hard time and I couldn't help her because she 12 couldn't listen to me. I gave her all the love I could 13 and I tried to talk to her about her son, but she wouldn't 14 listen.

15 So, I had to get somebody else to come 16 in. It is one of our own Native people that do the 17 workshops and he is fairly good at it. He gets through 18 to the people and she has really come a long way since 19 then. I think my nephew has been gone about four years.
20 She doesn't cry as much as she used to. It's really hard 21 on the families that are left behind. This is what we 22 tell the young people that are trying to attempt it.

23 One of the reserves that I lost these

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 people in was -- the young niece that was attempting 2 suicide, they called it -- they were starting a pact of 3 suicide people. The first niece I lost was part of that 4 pact. A young man was the leader of it and he would go 5 out with these girls and tell them that he loved them and 6 then he would two-time her and go out with somebody else.
7 Then the niece went over and he said, "Well, you'd kill 8 yourself over me anyway." So, this was the beginning of 9 the suicide pact, they called it. I don't like that word, 10 but we had to break it.

11 We belong to spiritual dancing and there 12 is spiritual dancing on the reserve so many years ago they 13 said that suicide that was done on that reserve -- this 14 man had hung himself close to the cemetery and they had 15 to give offerings to this man to break the suicides.

16 We are hoping that this will work with 17 our people in B.C.

18 My time must be up because I can't think 19 of anything else to say.

20 Thank you very much.

21 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
22 very much, Bev.

23 I think that the points in relation to

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 traditional healing approaches and our ceremonies is -- 2 grieving ceremonies are difficult to identify in a Royal 3 Commission report because they don't cost any money. I 4 think that is the richness in what we have to offer one 5 another.

6 The work that you do with your hands in 7 healing is different and a difficult phenomena to explain
8 to people like Mr. Dusseault. It's a little bit easier 9 with Georges and some of the Native Commissioners, but 10 I think it's important, what you're talking about, because 11 so many of the presentations have to do with programs.
12 So, I really appreciated your presentation.

13 I would like to break for coffee for the 14 next 15 minutes, please. If we could come back at 11:10.

15 Thank you very much.

16 --- Short recess at 10:45 a.m.

17 --- Upon resuming at 11:00 a.m.

18 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: If we 19 could have Connie Chartrand from the Métis National 20 Council, please, to present their project.

21 It's good, Connie, that we have young
22 people like yourself. I was at a suicide prevention 23 planning workshop in the Albert region and these young

1 people were addressing the fact that so many of the old 2 people that were there -- and they said, "You people, you're 3 a bunch of dinosaurs." I found out I fit into a new 4 category. So, I'm glad that we have youth that can speak 5 to the developments that are happening in our communities.

6 CONNIE CHARTRAND, METIS NATIONAL

7 COUNCIL: Thank you very much for the really positive 8 introduction.

9                   Actually, the kind of work that I do -- 10 I'm a little bit concerned about the fact that I am so 11 young because I do end up working with older women and 12 I'm not sure how comfortable they are in talking to a 13 younger woman like myself. I think it would be actually 14 a really good thing if there were more older women doing 15 this kind of work that I've been doing.

16                   On that note, I guess I will say what 17 I have been doing. I work for the Métis Women of Manitoba.
18 I'm the family violence project coordinator. I was hired 19 two and a half months ago to do family violence workshops 20 around the Province of Manitoba in various Métis
21 communities.

22                   Originally I was supposed to be -- the 23 objective of this project was to train women to be self-help

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 group facilitators. What I've been doing is actually just 2 going to each community and doing a one-day presentation
3 in each of the 14 communities. I realized that in order
4 to train women to be self-help group facilitators -- 5 obviously it is not possible to do in one day.

6 So, instead of making it a training
7 workshop I changed the focus more to a workshop aimed at 8 increasing awareness of the family violence issues, and 9 hopefully to stimulate an interest in doing self-help 10 groups.

11 The project that I've been doing has been 12 funded for three months only, so the funding has just about 13 come to an end. Now what I'm doing is looking for more 14 funding to not only continue my job, but also hopefully 15 to start a new program that would involve training women 16 in Métis communities to be community development workers.

17 Their responsibilities would include 18 running self-help groups, as well as other things, because 19 I'm not sure if it's fair to expect women to run self-help 20 groups on their own after my being there for one day and 21 then leaving. I'm basically leaving them on their own 22 and maybe I would pop in every now and again to see how 23 they're doing.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1                   So, I really think it's important that 2 I get a training program in place so that women can be 3 paid to do this kind of thing. So far everything is up
4 in the air. I'm not sure if I'll have a job in a couple 5 of weeks. I'm very concerned about that because what I've 6 been doing is opening up a lot of old wounds.

7                   In one sense these workshops have been 8 very productive because women have been talking a lot about 9 family violence that they've experienced, whether it was 10 being abused as children or being abused by partners or 11 being mothers of children being abused by their partners.

13                   There is certainly a lot of pain that's 14 been expressed at these workshops. I'm really concerned 15 that what I've been doing is going into the communities 16 and leaving inadequate support for these women.

17                   Another thing is, certainly with all the 18 pain that has been expressed, I'm concerned that there 19 are women who are feeling suicidal. So, I really am hoping 20 that I will be able to get a new program in place so that 21 these self-help groups will get off the ground.

22                   I guess that's it. I hope I haven't 23 depressed you too much, but hopefully this will come about

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 and we will all get some self-help groups running in the 2 Métis communities of Manitoba.

3 Thank you.

4 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
5 very much, Connie.

6 If you think about the different 7 resources that are available in the different parts of 8 Canada and the work that she's doing, maybe this is an 9 opportunity, for some of us who have training packages, 10 to share those packages with her. There are women, so 11 even if her project doesn't continue, the women can 12 continue their initiatives at the community level.

13 I know that it's not necessarily the 14 intention of the Commission, but I think it can be part 15 of the process where we could support what you're doing 16 in Manitoba. Thank you.

17 Joey, you wanted to say something?

18 JOEY HAMELIN, METIS NATIONAL COUNCIL:

19 Actually, it's not that we're disorganized, it's that 20 we're flexible. I notice that we just discussed this during 21 our break in terms of the national initiatives that are 22 specific to Métis.

23 Thank you, Connie. It's good to see

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 that we have young Métis women that are working in their 2 communities. A major issue that you touched on is the 3 issue of funding, in that funding that is designed 4 specifically for the Métis nation is not there.

5                   For example, there are some initiatives 6 -- the true family violence -- Health and Welfare, and 7 we do have access to funding, but we're in competition 8 with other organizations that sometimes they are further 9 developed than we are in our communities. Sometimes we 10 find, as community workers, that we are busy dealing with 11 crisis intervention and that a lot of our energy gets used 12 during crisis. It takes a lot of time to do the planning 13 and proposals and things like that.

14                   So, funding is an issue for Métis and 15 I hope that we can be recognized and be able to access 16 funding to address family violence.

17                   In the Province of Alberta we have the 18 Office for the Prevention of Family Violence. There are 19 limited dollars, and again, high competition with other 20 organizations to access these dollars.

21                   In Alberta one of the initiatives that 22 we have is a Métis Child and Family Services. Actually 23 in 1984 -- I mentioned Richard Cardinal who hung himself,

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 as a result of this there was a public out cry. The 2 government and the Métis communities and the Métis 3 organizations felt that, yes, we must start addressing 4 this and we must look after the Métis children,
5 particularly, a lot of the Métis children who get lost
6 in the Child Welfare System because there are no policies 7 specific to Métis. Once the children are apprehended and 8 get lost in the system it makes it harder for us to trace 9 or track down where all of our Métis children are in the 10 system.

11                   There have been policies in Manitoba in 12 which a lot of these children were transported or exported
13 to the United States. We have children all over the world 14 that we need to find. Those children that have lost their 15 identity as Métis people can be a cause for suicide or 16 suicidal behaviour. It is very important that we stress 17 that we maintain our Métis identity, our culture.

18                   Like I mentioned, we have a Métis
19 Services Organization in Alberta that was initiated 20 through Métis Local 1885. Today, eight years later, they 21 are celebrating their eighth anniversary on June 9th.
22 Eight years later they now have a provincial mandate from 23 the Métis Nation of Alberta.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1                   That organization with its sisters and 2   brothers, with the Manitoba Métis Federation and with the 3   other provinces hosted a first and a second National Métis 4   Child Care Conference. Again, having been involved with 5   those conferences, funding was very limited and there were 6   some wonderful recommendations that came out of both of 7   those conferences, but again, we need to take action.
8   It is our responsibility to follow up with those 9   recommendations that will assist us in our planning so 10   that we can prevent further suicides for our children who 11   do go through the Child Welfare System and also, who do 12   end up in jails.

13                  Just a brief note. Two years ago we did 14   research province-wide and we visited the prisons through 15   the Native Brotherhood. We found that a lot of the men 16   that were Métis had lost their identity and there were 17   a number of suicide attempts. One of the men shared with 18   us that he would be in jail for life. He had been in there 19   since 1954 -- this was at the Edmonton max -- and that 20   he had attempted suicide on a number of occasions. This 21   one time he swallowed a bunch of razor blades. He ended 22   up surviving to tell us his story.

23                  We heard many stories like that of the

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 many suicide attempts and some that were -- I don't think 2 you would use the word successful, but that were completed
3 suicides. Again, when we look at suicides we are looking 4 at it from the Métis community as a community
5 responsibility, but also we need to look at it from a 6 holistic -- a lot of that was mentioned this morning -- 7 and socio-economic part or the social economy.

8                   One of our major issues is poverty and 9 when we begin to address the issue of poverty and meeting 10 basic needs then that also helps us to feel good about 11 ourselves so that we can be contributing members to 12 society.

13                   I would just like to end with an incident
14 where I was working in the community in the north and a 15 young boy -- actually, there were several young boys who 16 were sexually abused by the school principal. One of the 17 young boys was ten years old and he hung himself in 18 November.

19                   Those are some of the issues as 20 technicians that we do become traumatized with through 21 that process. We do need to go and reach out and say, 22 as technicians, that we need that extra strength to 23 continue on in the communities that we work with, and at

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 the same time to push and promote and educate our 2 politicians, our leadership to make sure that suicide
3 prevention and social issues are again as equal a priority
4 as the Constitution.

5 Again, the Métis National Council is 6 planning on a third National Conference, again, to follow 7 up with our recommendations that we have made in both of 8 those National Conference reports.

9 I guess that's everything. Thank you.

10 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
11 very much, Joey.

12 I believe that Joey is a representative 13 of urban initiative when she talks about the suicide by 14 Richard Cardinal which resulted in a Native Child Welfare
15 Advisory Committee being developed by the province. Out 16 of that Committee we recommended to the province that they 17 set aside $100,000 per year so that Métis students could 18 work on an undergraduate program in social work.

19 To date, I believe that they have had 20 about 20 graduates from BSW Programs. The bursary each 21 student gets is approximately $20,000 per year, plus their 22 books, which is not a lot of money, but it is better than 23 having to go out and get a loan.

1                   Joey was one of the graduates from that 2 program. She is part of what I was talking about, the 3 reciprocity, because she is a leader within the Métis
4 community and she was on the first Board of the Métis 5 Children's Services. She is a leader in her own right.

6

7                   I'm sure she doesn't like to blow her 8 own horn, but I think that those kinds of initiatives where 9 provinces do set funds aside for people going to 10 post-secondary -- it can happen. It has happened in 11 Alberta.

12                   So, if we could move to the next speaker.

13       What we will do is move to the speakers first and then 14 we will leave the floor open to questions. If you could 15 write your questions down for each respective speaker.

16                   I apologize for using that process, but 17 we also have a luncheon speaker coming at 12:00.

18                   Sharon Jinkerson from the Native Council

1 Vancouver Aboriginal Child and Family Services. It was 2 an initiative begun by the United Native Nations. We've 3 been going for two years now and it's been a long journey.
4 Originally, I was on a team of crisis workers.

5 First of all, I would like to take a 6 moment to acknowledge the pain in this room. You can just 7 sense it as people are talking about all their losses.
8 I know that each and every one of us has been impacted 9 by suicide.

10 When I first began work at the crisis
11 centre we took crisis calls from 9:00 to 5:00 on our crisis 12 team. We started a program at the local hospital, the 13 Vancouver General, and I was the liaison worker for the 14 hospital.

15 There was a 14 year old -- we're all 16 telling our suicide stories now. This young woman had 17 tried to commit suicide four times. The last time she 18 jumped from a bridge and survived. That was when I went 19 in to see her. We talked about her story and she was a 20 foster child. Like Richard Cardinal, she had been in and 21 out of various homes, group homes, a variety of care
22 settings. The Ministry had made attempts to place her 23 with her own people, but those attempts broke down.

1                   I wrote a 14 page report on this young 2 child. I was so compelled and I was so angry because there 3 seemed to be no resources which would connect her to her 4 community which I felt would provide the life line. What 5 began to emerge, and what I had noticed from my work on 6 the crisis team, was an issue of belonging for these 7 children, the fact that they didn't belong anywhere. They 8 were just sort of floating. I think that it one of the 9 core issues for our people. If you don't belong anywhere 10 there's not a lot of reason to stick around. So, I saw 11 this young girl.

12                   They flew me up north for a big fancy 13 case conference and all of the suggestions and 14 recommendations that I made at the end of the report we 15 were unable to address, simply because there weren't any 16 resources. We were hung up by bureaucratic red tape and 17 the fact that she was non-status. That impaired us quite 18 a bit.

19                   Something that we face as urban agencies
20 is not being able to get funding. If you have a case load 21 which includes Métis people or non-status Indians, you're 22 unable to get federal health dollars to get proper 23 counselling and facilitators for your clients. They rule

1 you out right away, even though the majority of your people 2 are status.

3 We worked along and we eventually 4 emerged from the crisis centre into a family support
5 program. We just began to develop child welfare
6 initiatives in the City of Vancouver.

7 What we do as a team is deliver services
8 to families with child protection concerns. We saw a large 9 gap in the system for addressing foster care issues and 10 adopted Native children. For any of you that have received 11 statistics, it's a very difficult thing to do, but we know 12 that many of these children are suicidal.

13 You are looking at a survivor right now.
14 I grew up in the foster care system and made two suicide 15 attempts. My first one was at the age of 12. So, I was 16 very sensitive to this sector of our population.

17 I began to work with a therapist by the 18 name of Arden Henley and Arden Henley is a specialist in 19 belonging. We came up with a concept of a camp which would 20 welcome these children home to their community. It was 21 a marvellous experience. We held it last October and the 22 idea was that if we could reconnect these kids and give 23 them a sense of belonging, they might not use the option

1 to just rule themselves out of this life.

2 I would like to read a bit. I just 3 happen to have the article with me -- a little bit about 4 the camp, describing it, and some of the interventions
5 and a little bit about the theory. A lot of it is belonging 6 and attachment, but I will read the first part.

7 "Susan, a First Nation's adolescent, 8 first felt free to talk about the 9 drums in a group of First Nations
10 teens organized by First Nations
11 social workers and elders. Since 12 her earliest memories Susan heard
13 the loud beating of drums in her 14 dreaming."

15 This was one of the first readings that 16 we held with these teens. They were powerful. I thought 17 I had a powerful story to tell until I started to hear 18 these teens. They were truly the light in a tunnel of 19 darkness. They shared and talked about their experience, 20 the loneliness that they felt and they couldn't describe 21 to anyone until they were with us.

22 Give me a second here to find the last 23 page. I will read to you a little summary about the camp.

1     This is written by the therapist and it was published
2     in the Western Therapist Journal this past spring.
3     "On Thanksgiving weekend this past year I was involved 4                             in a ritual of inclusion that was 5                             described as a cross-cultural 6                             camp. Twenty caucasian adoptive 7                             and foster care families, with 8                             their First Nations children in 9                             their care, gathered with First 10                            Nations community workers and 11                            elders for the weekend. It began 12                            and ended with the smoking of the 13                            sacred pipe in a circle and was 14                            replete with First Nations art and 15                            rituals.

16
17                           Two traditional Thanksgiving meals were 18                           prepared. One of venison and 19                           salmon and one of turkey. Sharon 20                           Jinkerson and I hosted an 21                           adolescent caucus on belonging
22                           during which many young people 23                           acknowledged for the first time the

1 pain and bewilderment of their 2 separation from their heritage.
3 In a subsequent group, held for 4 both parents and young people, they 5 were able to speak of this sense
6 of isolation while at the same time
7 expressing their love and 8 appreciation for those who cared 9 for them."

10 In such moment, a vision of multiple 11 belonging emerges in the context
12 of which the young person is free 13 to belong with their adoptive and 14 foster care families and connect 15 with their heritage. Perhaps as 16 importantly, these families were 17 incorporated in the young persons
18 broader heritage as a First Nations
19 person.

20 The weekend closed with a traditional 21 potlatch, a ceremony in which gift
22 giving and speeches complimenting
23 the participants are combined. A

1 button blanket had been made
2 especially for the occasion on 3 which was sewn a tree of life. On 4 the branches of this tree small 5 velcro patches were scattered 6 awaiting the buttons that were 7 distributed amongst the young 8 people. One by one they were 9 called forward by the elders and 10 honoured guests to place their 11 buttons on the blanket
12 re-authoring the story of their 13 connection to their people."

14 I want to say right here that we realize 15 in our agency that we are reliant on the non-Native care 16 giver simply because the resources don't exist within our 17 own community. Our primary objective is to keep children 18 within their own community, but in instances where children 19 are forced to live outside our community we realize that 20 it's up to us to be the bridge, as an urban agency, and 21 to bring these kids home to keep them connected, and 22 eventually to facilitate their return to their home 23 communities as young adults, as I did in my personal

1 journey.

2                   This is one of the interventions that 3 we've used, but we need a lot more. We need to have 4 on-going counselling for these children. We need to 5 develop this theory a lot further. We are starting to 6 look at relating this theory and therapy to the youth in 7 our community so that we can begin to incorporate these 8 rituals of inclusion for teens, even if they are living 9 with their families.

10                  Often times in the urban settings these 11 teenagers lose track of their roots, of their communities, 12 so we envision a community within the urban setting where 13 we include -- because the ceremonies of our people are 14 so potent we have the ability to heal ourselves within 15 our own community.

16                  I don't think any of us really understand 17 exactly what happens, even the telling of a traditional 18 story can unify and a group of our people will just belong 19 to each other upon hearing these stories. We intend to 20 use these with our youth.

21                  We have an initiative right now to run 22 a youth program. Our primary focus for that will be 23 belonging as well as traditional culture. We intend to

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 use the healing arts of our people, like story telling, 2 to begin to work with these youth because the statistics 3 are just staggering in suicide and violent deaths. They 4 are all very very high.

5                   We have another initiative for a home 6 in which we don't apprehend children from families where 7 there are child protection concerns, but rather take the 8 whole family into care. It is the kind of concept where 9 the community parents the family. That way we hope to 10 reduce the trauma on children so that we can work with 11 the whole family.

12                   We hope to reduce that shame that happens 13 to our people when their children get apprehended, to work 14 with a community committee to bring the whole family into 15 a process of healing. It will be done with the care, 16 generosity and kindness, of our people.

17                   This camp that we had included children
18 from all nations, Métis, non-status and status children 19 and it was just wonderful. In the follow-up, I have kept 20 in touch, many of the teens still see me on an ongoing 21 basis. They come in for weekly appointments and they're 22 doing marvellously. Many families are planning to bring 23 their children home to their home communities.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 Parents are beginning to realize that
2 these children will forever be First Nations children.
3 A piece of paper in a court of law will never change their 4 ancestry. Parents are beginning to get a hold of that 5 and work with our community to have their children 6 re-belong. So, it has been a wonderful process.

7 I really feel that an initiative like 8 this camp will reduce statistics in the future. I know 9 that that was part of the issue for myself growing up, 10 was not having anyone to communicate what was happening 11 inside.

12 We are running a few other programs as 13 well, teaching communication skills for teen groups, et 14 cetera.

15 I thank you for your time.

16 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
17 very much.

18 I think it is awesome in terms of the 19 ceremony, ritual and story telling.

1                   JOE KARETAK, INUIT TAPIRISAT OF CANADA:

2       Thank you.

3                   I have a lot of people to thank for being 4       here and I might just go briefly to the Royal Commission, 5       I think, for at least going to the north and hearing the 6       people. We thought that we were being heard when we all 7       went to the Royal Commission and some of the programs that 8       they have been involved in. I'm very pleased.

9                   I think with the Keewatin Region where 10       I'm from we have a lot of problems because some of the 11       things that we felt would help prevent suicide are the 12       things that -- I'm not quite clear on how to put it, but 13       some of the things that I wanted to bring up in this workshop
14       is the Baffin Crisis Line, which has already been there 15       for a few years. I think it started off a lot of these 16       things that we're doing. We are now called the Keewatin
17       Crisis Line and we used the Baffin Crisis Line as an example 18       of what we would try and produce.

19                  One thing that we wanted to try and do
20       in our area is because a lot of Native people don't speak 21       English, and not only youth are troubled, we wanted to 22       try and produce a program that would train people in the 23       Native language and, not knowing, we came across a few

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 problems mostly language-wise. There are a lot of 2 expressions that are very easy to do in English that you 3 would never find in the Inuit language. The only way we 4 thought we could do this is if we invented new words to 5 try and interpret some of the programs the way the crisis 6 line is normally programmed.

7                   So, what we did was we had an adult 8 education teacher who had been living in the north for 9 a long time as one of the people to set up the program.
10 There was a social services representative on suicide
11 who helped us with the program. We had an Inuk teacher 12 and myself and another Inuk person to try and put this 13 program together.

14                   We held one in February and some of the 15 things that we came across, and some of the problems we 16 had, were that the Inuit people's normal behaviours tend 17 to go against a lot of what the crisis line people try 18 to train you not to do. As far as the crisis line 19 guidelines, we were training people in English, but we 20 had trouble putting them into the Inuit understanding.

21                   I'm not sure if that's why the training 22 was successful or not. It's hard to rate it. So far most 23 of the calls are still from people who are bilingual, and

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 there's been some cases where there have been suicides
2 and we know those people didn't speak any English at all.
3 That has always been a very big concern for us. We are 4 trying to address it.

5                   We are going to try again in the fall
6 because a lot of the people that come up north work up 7 there for a while and then they go back down south, but 8 they are the only ones who seem to have the time to be 9 on the crisis line. We have now been running for a couple 10 of years and the same people that started the crisis line 11 program are the same people still in there.

12                   With the high turnover, and a lot of 13 people leaving and things like that, we've had to probably 14 provide more training than what we are producing right 15 now. We are trying to produce two training sessions a 16 year. The problem is getting the program translated.
17 We are still trying to adjust so that this fall, when we 18 do try again, we will see how that goes.

19                   We do recognize that as far as the crisis 20 line goes a lot of the problems are self-esteem. Some 21 of the problems they indicate is that they don't feel they 22 have a purpose or a role within the community. We think 23 it's true. We need to see more of a role for everybody

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on

1 to have.

2                   It's almost like, for example, we're all 3 just riding on a sled and a skidoo is pulling us and we're 4 going somewhere. We're all just riding and when the 5 snowmobile starts going through a trouble area, where the 6 load is heavy, I think some of the people feel that "I'm 7 just a load anyway, maybe I should just get off". I think 8 that might be one of the feelings that they get when they 9 are from a large family and there's always a shortage of 10 money. I think that adds to a lot of the pressure that 11 we felt shouldn't really be there or should be addressed 12 in some way.

13                   Some of the things that we have 14 encountered, as far as workshops up there, we recognize 15 that there needs to be some form of anger management, I 16 think, with a lot of the people up there. We've not had 17 that much training or anything that ever told us how to 18 deal with anger, and that might account for a lot of the 19 spousal assaults, as far as that goes.

20                   We've had elders concerned enough to try 21 and get something going, but a lot of the things that are 22 able to be ongoing require, as Inuit people feel -- we 23 call it paperwork. We are not very good at it yet, and

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 we are trying to get better at it. You do need the 2 paperwork to get the funding or to get all these things.
3 That is the area that we are very weak in. We are all 4 concerned and we are all trying to do things as we can,
5 but any time we go any place and ask for certain things, 6 it has to be explained in certain ways on paper in such 7 a way that -- of course, like I mentioned we are weak at 8 that.

9                   Some of the things that we've had to also 10 deal with is that we do try and provide the crisis line 11 for the Keewatin Region which means all the costs have 12 to be long distance. The system we have up there was so 13 bad that we had to have people call in collect. Of course, 14 when you're trying to advertise that it will be 15 confidential -- of course, when you call collect you have 16 to give a name. That sort of goes against the program.

17                   So, we now have just put on the program 18 what is called the reversal call. Now we have to advertise 19 all over again to try and get people to understand what 20 a reversal call is. So, not only are we trying to educate 21 the trainers, we are trying to even educate the people 22 who we are trying to help in order to access this program.

23                   These are just some of the things that

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 we felt that we wanted to try and get known as far as the 2 situation in the north.

3                   One of the things that I was pleased to 4 hear was the stress and trauma that we encounter as 5 volunteers -- it's true that you almost know the person.

6   Most of the time when it's suicide we do know who it is.

7   I think in other places when you're in a larger area, 8 larger population, you might not know who that person is 9 that you're dealing with. That is a lot easier.

10                  We have, as an example, some of these 11 problems in other communities where they are a bit more 12 remote, we don't know them. They are easier for us to 13 talk to. It seems to be so true that some of the problems 14 that I encounter for myself are because a person I know, 15 or a relative I know, is the person asking for help. It's 16 very hard to stay within that -- keep your distance away
17 a little bit, don't get too involved. So, I'm very pleased 18 to ask that if there is any way of dealing with that we 19 would like to be helped in that area.

20                  I think as far as the rest of the 21 programs, I think I am here more to learn from everybody.

22   We know that if we look to deal with these problems we 23 can't just target one certain group of people. We have

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 to involve everybody and all the resources that are 2 available to us. One of things where we do need a lot 3 of help is in being able to target the funding that is 4 supposed to be available for these.

5 Thank you.

6 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
7 very much, Joe.

8 We have a few minutes for questions or 9 comments from the floor. I would ask that when you go 10 to the microphone that you identify yourself for the 11 interpreters and for the recorders.

12 RODA GREY: Roda Grey, again.

13 I would like to respond to Joe's
14 statements about our language in Inuktituk. He is really 15 right when it comes to dealing with counselling or that 16 kind of skill. We really have to find the right words.
17 It is really really hard to make that feeling to -- it 18 would be much easier if everyone could speak in English 19 to try to counsel somebody, but because we have to be very 20 careful of what we say when somebody is trying to hang 21 on to the cliff, we don't want to say the wrong word.
22 I want people to realize that Inuktituk is a very hard 23 language and we really appreciate what he is trying to

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 do.

2                   There was another thing I forgot that 3 was to do with language barrier we have in the north.
4 The other thing is that we don't have all the resources 5 in the north. It is really really hard for us to try to 6 deal with all these things. Like he was talking about 7 someone on a skidoo and they don't have a purpose, they 8 didn't have a role. I mentioned earlier this morning about 9 confidence. If you don't have self-worth, self-esteem, 10 you don't have confidence.

11                  The other thing is closer reality which 12 is another issue in the north. It's very very hard to 13 talk to your own families. I am in the process of healing, 14 but I cannot pass to my mother because she is close to 15 me. I can help others. I can talk to others easily, but 16 it's very very hard to deal with your own families. It's 17 really a struggle. You are surrounded by your own 18 relatives. It's really really hard. I have helped many 19 people who were not my relatives, but I cannot touch my 20 relatives. It's really really hard.

21                  So, we really have not only greater 22 problems in the north, but we have also many many barriers.
23 Also, the other thing that he mentioned was that people

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 are doing the same thing, the same people. We don't have 2 many many people here. These people coming from the north, 3 it's the second or third time I see them at workshops like 4 this because there are no other people. They are very 5 very special people and they have worked hard and they 6 have their own families.

7 One of the things that we worry about 8 for the people in the north is there is a lot of risk of 9 burnout because there is so much work they have to do.

10 The other thing Joe is asking for is if 11 there would be any training on how to deal with your own 12 feelings, so that you can keep your distance when you're 13 counselling your own relatives. That skill is really 14 needed in the north.

15 Thank you.

16 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
17 very much, Roda.

18 DIANA DELORME: Can I talk from here,
19 I have a loud voice?

20 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Can the 21 interpreters hear her?

22 DIANA DELORME: Can you hear me?

23 In Edmonton I have been working with

June 7, 1993

1 people for the last ---

2 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Your 3 name?

4 DIANA DELORME: I'm sorry. I'm Diana
5 Delorme. I'm from Edmonton.

6 I have been working with people for the 7 last 22 years and occasionally I run across foster families 8 whose little children have tried to commit suicide. It's 9 okay for me to walk into their homes and talk with them, 10 but if I suggest that they come to the pipe ceremonies, 11 the healing circles that we have, they say no.

12 Does anybody have an idea on how I can 13 get around these people so that we can help our own? I 14 leave that for you.

15 SHARON JINKERSON: I would like to 16 respond to you about that. Working and studying this issue 17 for a couple of years, and being raised in that situation
18 myself, I feel that I can address you.

19 One of the issues for parents and 20 adoptive parents or foster parents is safety because they 21 feel afraid of the Native community, that they will be 22 viewed as child snatchers. So, one of the keys to the 23 successes of our camp was creating safety for parents.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 We did that before the camp by having a series of parent
2 meetings so that there could be a portion of self-direction 3 there, what they needed to feel safe, what topics they 4 needed to have information on before we entered into a 5 project like that. It's so critical to have a level of 6 safety there for these parents.

7                   The other issue that these parents have 8 to face by facing the Aboriginal community is their own
9 loss issues. It means acknowledging that these kids
10 actually aren't theirs. They belong some place else, 11 emotionally and all the rest of it.

12                   Don't get me wrong, I realize they are 13 members of the families that they are being raised in, 14 but there is an awful lot of loss issues. So what parents 15 have to overcome is their own fear of addressing their 16 loss issues and meeting the needs of the child because 17 the child is the primary client. That is something that 18 has to be sort of gently worked on over a period of time.

19                   Thank you.

20                   MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Also, in 21 Edmonton there is a Foster Parent's Association that are 22 white foster parents and adoptive parents and sometimes 23 they will make a visit to that family because they have

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on

1    been in similar situations and they have the fears that 2    she is talking about. That's one of the possibilities.

3                    ARNOLD CHEECHOO: My name is Arnold
4    Cheechoo and I'm representing the Cree's CBC North out
5    of Montreal. I'm originally from Moose Factory, Ontario, 6    James Bay.

7                    I just wanted to respond to the lady from 8    Edmonton. There are a lot of Native people who don't 9    advertise their services and a lot of these people are 10   traditional people. I come in contact with a lot of these 11   people and usually if you offer them tobacco, and you get 12   in contact with them personally, you will find out what 13   their agenda's are, because a lot of these people do have 14   heavy agendas to travel all over the country of Canada.

15                   These people, if you can get in contact 16   with them in your area -- I don't know who the traditional 17   contact people could be, but once you contact one person 18   then you have a whole network all across Canada and the 19   United States.

20                   You can offer tobacco to these people 21   and the arrangement can be made between the individual 22   person that is asking for help for travel arrangements 23   with these people, or perhaps an organization that the

1 person that is asking for help can approach the 2 organization to say, "I would like this certain person 3 who is a traditional medicine man to come to my community", 4 and the healing process might start from some of these 5 people with that type of experience.

6 A lot of these people -- like I said,
7 they don't advertise in the newspaper. They don't even 8 have business cards. They are just around and you just 9 have to make the connection with the traditional peoples 10 of Canada and the United States.

11 Thank you.

12 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
13 very much.

14 Diana is one of those people who doesn't 15 advertise her services. She is one of our medicine women.

16 Any more questions or comments?

17 Adamie, please.

18 ADAMIE SALLUALUK: My name is Adamie
19 Sallualuk from Povungnituk in northern Quebec, Inuit 20 region.

21 I would like to thank the Royal
22 Commission and all the people I know here.

23 I just want to say a few words about how

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 we are doing in our Inuit region. We, from the community
2 of Povungnituk have been on The Journal, it was a deadly 3 summer and the suicide is very high. We've been having 4 training from Suicide Action Montreal. We invited the 5 communities to talk about suicide and we had training in 6 different things like: Why do Inuit kill themselves?
7 We had so many things to say to answer this question.
8 What we found out is that pain kills and the silence.
9 So, we were talking about breaking the silence.

10 Also, the suicide of people, how we 11 should help? Also, suicidal people are helpless and how 12 do we help them? We also looked at the danger signs of 13 suicide and what do we do to suicidal approach? We had 14 all those and by going through those we learned how to 15 counsel, we learned how to talk to a person who needs help.

16 Still, there was something missing.
17 So, we lost special people, young people and the age is 18 always about 15 to 17. By looking at 17 or 16 years ago
19 the parents, the community and the family -- you know, 20 there was something wrong.

21 So, like we say, we learn from mistakes.
22 We went to say that we need to ask young people. What 23 we received was risk factors for suicide among Inuit youth

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 in Povungnituk. We really wanted to find out how they 2 think when they have problems or when they end up having 3 an attempted suicide.

4                   We had a survey from 100 youth, 100 young 5 people and out of that 100, 35 per cent of the youth had 6 attempted suicide. There is something wrong. We looked 7 on different findings, like they are sniffing, marijuana, 8 students and non-students, unemployment and alcohol with 9 relatives, with no such relatives, youth who watch 10 television more than three hours or, on the other hand, 11 less than an hour, and similarly the findings are touchy.

12                   So, 27 per cent of youths suffer physical 13 abuse, sexual abuse. Young people worry about community 14 violence. Some have been arrested at very young ages 15 because of those problems.

16                   We covered all this -- if I go through 17 it it would take all day. What I found was it's better 18 to work closely with young people by having such 19 questionnaires. The findings are telling us that we 20 should do something about it.

21                   I just would like to thank you for this 22 time.

23                   MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 very much, Adamie.

2                   Would it be possible for you to share
3 that study with the -- give it to some of the Commission 4 people so that they can include considerations that are 5 particularly relevant to the northern community?

6                   ADAMIE SALLUALUK: Yes, I brought some 7 copies. So with this we share, to try to find what is 8 best for the organizations and to work on this.

9                   Thank you.

10                  MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: With your 11 usual generosity, Adamie. Thank you very much.

12                  If we could break for lunch now and we 13 will be coming back at 1:30 to this room.

14                  Myrtle, is there another -- oh, there's 15 another question.

16                  CAROLINE ENNIS: Could I just make a 17 suggestion?

18                  It seems to me that what everybody here
19 is talking about is a national problem, and what that lady 20 there was talking about, what they did in Vancouver, that 21 could be done on a regional basis. Then we could bring 22 in everybody that is connected to Aboriginal youth, whether 23 they are Métis, non-status, status -- I don't see those

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 divisions. I just see Indian people as Indian people no 2 matter whether they are from, a reserve or wherever they 3 are from.

4                   So, my suggestion is that they have 5 regional things like what they did with the white foster
6 parents and the elders and then eventually come together 7 at a national level to do pretty much the same thing, but 8 I think the political organizations in Canada should start 9 acknowledging that this is a national problem and that 10 they have to make it a priority. I don't even see any 11 of the -- of course, I don't recognize all the national 12 leaders, but I don't see them here.

13                   I think that things like this are really 14 important and it needs national -- it has to be looked 15 at from a national scope and then be addressed in that 16 way, because these people that are working now in the small 17 Inuit communities or whatever, they are going to burn out.
18 There is nothing there to address that burn-out problem.
19 Like he said, there are only the same people that are 20 working in those areas continuously.

21                   So, I think we need to start looking at 22 it as a national problem and to force the political 23 organizations to get after the government to see it as

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 a national problem.

2 SHARON JINKERSON: I would like to 3 respond.

4 One reason why I differentiated between 5 the groups that we work for was what I outlined earlier, 6 the fact that we can't get any federal dollars for programs 7 if we have non-status people, which happens in the urban 8 settings and our Métis people. So, we are reliant on 9 provincial dollars to get any initiatives like this going.
10 I think it's a shame to rule out funding on that basis.

11 The other thing I would like to 12 acknowledge here is that our agency was initiated by United 13 Native Nations which is a member of NCC and Nelson Mayer 14 -- because I never put a budget together -- came to my 15 office and helped me to put it together. So I think that 16 our leaders will be there when you call upon them directly 17 and present exactly what you want. I just asked Nelson 18 for about a half an hour of his time to help me finish 19 up this project and get it off the ground.

20 Thank you.

21 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: I believe 22 that that is the intent of the recommendations that are 23 going to be put forward this afternoon, to look at how

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples

1 they can be built into a national strategy from the Royal 2 Commission.

3 So, with that, if we could move -- we 4 are going to reconvene at 1:30 p.m. and then we will direct 5 you from there because we need to have our facilitators 6 being identified at 1:30 p.m.

7 I would expect the facilitators will 8 honour us and be back at 1:30 p.m.

9 --- Upon recessing at 12:00 p.m.

10 --- Upon resuming at 12:20 p.m.

11 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: I would
12 like to introduce our keynote speaker, Dr. Paul King.
13 He is the Chief Psychologist at the North Bay Psychiatric 14 Hospital.

15 DR. PAUL R. KING, NORTH BAY PSYCHIATRIC
16 HOSPITAL: Thank you very much, Maggie. As we are waiting 17 to eat until I'm finished, I feel this tremendous pressure 18 to be fast. I will do my best on that, but if some of 19 you absolutely can't wait and you want to get up there, 20 I guess you could be forgiven.

21 I would like to begin by just saying that 22 I've had the pleasure of attending the full session this 23 morning and I was tremendously moved by most of the things

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 that were said. Yes, there is an awful lot of courage
2 and there are an awful lot of resources right here in this 3 room.

4                   There was mention made about confidence
5 on a couple of occasions. Standing up here in front of 6 all of you now what I would like to say is what might appear 7 to be confidence is often thinly disguised, and 8 particularly in the situation I'm in.

9                   I am acutely aware that I am not a member 10 of the Aboriginal community and for someone like me to 11 be here is sort of a worst nightmare, as I'm going to present 12 you with material that is perhaps not very relevant or 13 worse, down right insulting. Now, I don't think that will 14 happen, at least I hope not.

15                   I would like to begin by thanking you
16 for inviting me to be here today. I am very very flattered
17 to have been asked to address this luncheon and I hope 18 the material that I will be describing is going to be useful
19 to you. I have been told that I have the floor for 45
20 minutes, but I will try to cut that down some. Like I 21 said, the food is all here.

22                   It definitely means that I should get 23 started. I have the cue cards here. There are 42 of them

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 and I did some calculating and if I do one card each 1.017
2 minutes, I believe then we will get the whole thing through 3 in 45 minutes.

4                               This is a conference about suicide
5 prevention and suicide prevention is what I would like 6 to talk to you about. I also want to talk to you about 7 crisis intervention counselling because suicidal feelings
8 and suicidal thoughts usually are connected with one kind 9 of crisis or another.

10                              What I will be saying has been extracted 11 from a half-day workshop on crisis intervention. That 12 workshop covers -- the entire workshop covers the areas 13 on the overhead. What I would like to present this 14 afternoon would be areas D, on suicide and suicide risk 15 assessment, and G, which concerns crisis intervention 16 counselling.

17                              There are 22 of these overheads for the 18 entire crisis intervention workshop and I have arranged 19 for copies of these to be made available to you. They 20 look like this and there are about 55 copies sitting on 21 the table just outside there. Please do help yourselves 22 if you find them useful.

23                              Just before I start into suicide and

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 suicide risk assessment there is one point I would like 2 to emphasize very strongly, I am not here to tell you how 3 you should be doing it. I don't think that is very 4 respectful and I also think that there have been far too 5 many occasions of people from outside the Aboriginal 6 community telling you how it should be done.

7 I am here to present some material that 8 I hope will be useful to you. Whether or not the concepts 9 that I present do help you in the Aboriginal community
10 that is, of course, for you to decide. If it turns out 11 that some of this is useful, terrific. If it turns out 12 that it isn't that useful, well I can accept that too.
13 You know your situation far better than I am ever going 14 to be able to.

15 About suicide and suicide risk
16 assessment, tragically it is the case that suicide is at 17 an alarming level in the Aboriginal community. All of 18 you, I think, are familiar with the statistics so I am 19 going to confine my comments to three recent trends, one 20 of which is directly relevant to the Aboriginal community.

21 First, as was said many many times this 22 morning, there has been a very very significant increase 23 in the completed suicides among young persons. In terms

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 of Canadian society generally, suicide is now the second 2 leading cause of death for people under the age of 35.

3 Second, the suicide rate among women,
4 especially young women, is very much on the rise.

5 Third, the suicide rate in the 6 Aboriginal community is very high. It is now the highest 7 of any ethnic group in the entire world.

8 Now, I do recognize that the rate has 9 declined somewhat in recent years, but it is still very 10 very high. For Native males ages 14 to 24, the suicide 11 rate is about 10 times the national average.

12 Let's look at some of the demographic 13 variables that are associated with suicide risk. This 14 overhead identifies seven demographic variables that have 15 some relationship to risk of suicidal behaviour. I would 16 like to try and be a bit more specific and give you some 17 information about levels of suicide risk within various 18 subgroups of each demographic category.

19 On the left of this overhead you have 20 the same categories as on the previous overhead. What 21 you can notice is that the left side, has a relatively 22 low risk of suicide. To the right side, you have a 23 relatively high risk of suicide. The way to look at this

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 chart is kind of like this. In terms of gender, for 2 example, on number E here, there is a relatively low risk
3 of suicide among females and a relatively high suicide
4 risk among males.

5                   Now, in terms of predicting suicide risk 6 on the basis of demographic variables, there are three 7 points that I would strongly emphasize. First, suicide
8 is a very individual phenomenon. Second, because suicide 9 is a very individual phenomenon demographic variables like 10 these ones here, they represent only a very rough 11 indication of suicide risk. Third, in consideration of 12 the two points that I have just made, I recommend that 13 we not be lulled into complacency because particular 14 clients don't have a high risk profile.

15                   History of previous suicidal behaviour
16 is a particularly important indication of current risk 17 in the case of the suicidal client before you. Why?
18 Because suicidal behaviour tends to escalate over time.
19

20                   Sometimes we have situations of an 21 individual committing suicide and it appears to be out 22 of the clear blue sky. Yes, there are situations like 23 that. More often it's like this, where the person

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 progresses from suicidal ideation, to making a suicide
2 threat, to making a gesture, an attempt, a serious suicide
3 attempt and then death.

4                   This is why people who commit suicide
5 usually have attempted suicide before because of this 6 phenomenon. Consequently, a current suicidal client with 7 a history of having made a serious attempt is a person 8 who presents a high risk.

9                   Just before addressing some of the 10 clinical predictors of suicide risk, just a few words about 11 the emotional underpinning to suicidal behaviour. In 12 terms of the dynamics of suicide, what we heard this 13 morning, these kinds of issues were emphasized again and 14 again and again in all kinds of very diverse communities, 15 very diverse situations, these kinds of issues kept coming 16 through.

17                   The dynamics of suicidal behaviour can 18 be understood in terms of four "nesses" if you like:
19 aloneness, helplessness, hopelessness and worthlessness.

20       It might be useful to keep those things in mind as we 21 go over some of the critical predictors of suicide risk.

22                   In terms of these clinical predictors 23 there are eight that I would like to tell you about, these

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 eight here. I will put these in the form of questions, 2 questions that should be considered in the clinical 3 situation of assessing suicide risk.

4 1. What is the person's intention?
5 Is the person saying, "I want to die", or is the person
6 saying, "I don't want to live like this"? There is clearly 7 more risk if they wish death.

8 2. Is there a suicidal plan? The 9 presence of a carefully thought out plan increases the 10 risk of suicide.

11 3. What kind of emotion is the person
12 expressing and how strong is the emotion? The strong 13 emotions, particularly things like anger and bitterness, 14 denote higher risk.

15 4. Is there a family history of 16 suicide? If so, suicidal behaviour may be seen as more 17 acceptable by your client.

18 5. How are problems usually handled 19 by the person, with impulsivity and loss of control? If 20 so, this increases suicide risk.

21 6. Is there a tendency towards 22 violence? This might be suggested by the existence of 23 police contacts. Remember, suicide is a violent act so

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 a track record of violence is always a sign.

2 7. Does the person experience his 3 problems as overwhelming? If so, suicide may appear to 4 be a more attractive option for that person.

5 8. Finally, are supportive resources
6 available or unavailable? The lack of such resources 7 points to social isolation which increases suicide risk.

8 You will remember a few minutes back that the dynamics
9 of suicide -- one of those four nesses was aloneness.
10 Somebody who does have supportive resources available is 11 not alone.

12 The last thing that I would like to 13 address in this area concerns ambivalence. I personally 14 believe that ambivalence with respect to wanting to die
15 is always present. A part of the person wants to live, 16 part of the person wants to die.

17 In terms of intervening with suicidal
18 clients, ambivalence is perhaps the therapists strongest 19 ally. Intervention should be aligned with that part of 20 the person that wants to live. The kinds of questions 21 she might ask are: Is there part of you that doesn't want 22 to give up? Is that part of you getting stronger or weaker?
23 What are the things that would have to happen to increase

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 the strength of that part of you that does not want to 2 give up? Those kinds of questions.

3 Interventions should also address the 4 themes presented under dynamics of suicide. Again,
5 aloneness, helplessness, hopelessness and worthlessness.

6 Earlier in this presentation I mentioned
7 that suicidal feelings and thoughts are usually connected 8 with one kind of a crisis or another. Often if we want 9 to help the suicidal person then we are really helping 10 him or her dealing with the crisis situation.

11 In crisis counselling -- crisis
12 intervention counselling is the process of intervening 13 with people who are in crisis and the goal of crisis 14 counselling is to help a person return to his or her 15 pre-crisis level of functioning.

16 I would like to think of crisis
17 counselling as a process that answers seven questions.
18 The seven questions I'm referring to are these ones:

19 1. What are the problems?

20 2. What is the priority of each 21 problem?

22 3. For each problem, what are the 23 available options?

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1                           4.    For each problem, what is the best 2   available option?

3                           5.    For each problem, does the selected 4   option have a deadline?

5                           6.    For each problem, what are the 6   steps in exercising this selected option?

7                           7.    For each problem, what is the 8   outcome of the selected option?

9                           Now, to give you a flavour for this 10   process I would like to refer to a concrete example.
11   Suppose this is what you hear from your client:  "I'm 18
12   years old and I left home a few months ago because my father
13   was beating me up.  When I left there I went to Toronto
14   and lived on the street for a while.  Then I met this guy
15   from North Bay and -- I had to stick North Bay in there 16   because that's where I'm from you see -- then I met this 17   guy from North Bay and he said I could come up here and 18   stay with him.  We've been having sex and I think I'm 19   pregnant.  I should have had my period two weeks ago.
20   I came here today because the guy I was staying with threw 21   me out.  I don't have any money and I didn't know where 22   else to go."

23                           Now, let's go back to the seven questions

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 and see how they might be applied to this situation.

2 The first one, what are the problems?

3 Well, our girl has actually said five things. She said
4 she is a long way from home. She said her father was often 5 violent with her. She might be pregnant. She has no place 6 to stay and she has no money.

7 At this point, what we want to do is 8 catalogue the problems as accurately as possible. More 9 than anything else, crisis intervention counselling is 10 an exercise in problem solving. If one is going to engage 11 in a problem- solving process, one had best have a passing 12 acquaintance with the problems.

13 The second of these questions: What is 14 the priority of each problem? In our example the 15 difficulties are not of equal importance, some issues are 16 very pressing, others don't have quite as much urgency.
17 Again, in crisis counselling you are guiding your client
18 through a problem-solving process. In doing so you want 19 to help a client take this great huge overwhelming
20 terrifying mess and break it up into some more manageable 21 pieces. So, you want to help the client prioritize the 22 problems.

23 In our example I've heard her mention

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 five things that are hard for her now. She has said she 2 has no money, she has no place to stay, et cetera, et cetera,
3 et cetera. If you had to pick the one thing that is more 4 urgent than the other four, what might it be? What would 5 the next most urgent thing be and so on? Notice that I
6 did not say the most important thing, I said the most urgent 7 thing.

8 In our example the most important thing
9 is probably "I think I'm pregnant". The most urgent thing 10 is likely "I have no place to stay". After all, it's 11 January 15th in North Bay and it 30 degrees below zero, 12 not having a place to stay is not an insignificant thing.

13 You have now helped her to take this huge 14 mess and cut it up into five smaller pieces. You have 15 also helped her identify which mess is the most urgent
16 and which is next, et cetera. What do you do now? Well, 17 what I do now is let you know that I'm going to illustrate 18 the rest of this process, questions 3 to 7 inclusive, with 19 one problem. Other identified problems are handled 20 through the same sort of procedure.

21 So, let's go back to: What do we do now?
22 The third of these seven questions: For each problem, 23 what are the available options? Basically, how can the

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 problems be addressed? In this question I have not said:
2 What are the attractive options? I have said: What are 3 the available options?

4 Let's assume that our girl does conclude 5 that accommodation is the most pressing matter, the idea 6 of identifying options can be introduced with something 7 like this: "You're feeling that accommodation is the most 8 pressing matter, let's try and think about only that issue
9 and never mind the rest for the next little while. Now, 10 what are the possibilities? Let's put them all down on 11 paper without deciding which one is best."

12 Now ideally you want the ideas to come 13 from her because solving the problems is her trial. So, 14 if she doesn't know, try and help her to look at it from 15 a different angle. If you had a girlfriend in exactly 16 the same situation as you are now and she asked you what 17 she could do, what would you tell her? If you were writing 18 a book about the situation you are in, what would identify 19 as possibilities for the girl in the book? Something like 20 this. This is the counsellor's chance to be creative.

21 Some of the options in our example:
22 Well, she can call the guy she was staying with and ask 23 him about coming back. You see what I mean by the options

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 don't have to be attractive. She can sleep at the bus
2 station. She can call a friend of the family that lives
3 here. She can go to a woman's shelter.

4                   The fourth question: What is the best 5 available option? When the list of available options is 6 complete you can look at the attractiveness of each one.
7 Are there any of these possibilities that stand out as 8 the best one? Hopefully, the answer is going to be, "Yes, 9 this one". If the answer is no, then you can ask: Is 10 there one of these that stands out as being the worst?
11 That process of elimination can be used to get rid of all 12 but one option.

13                   Now remember, it is her option, not 14 yours. If the one she chooses really makes you shudder, 15 for example, sleeping in the bus station, you can alert
16 her to this by asking about her decision-making process.
17 What made you chose that one? What are the things that 18 you took into consideration? And so forth.

19                   In helping her select an option,
20 remember that choosing the lesser of two evils may well 21 be her reality. The eventual choice is not likely to be 22 perfectly wonderful and entirely acceptable.

23                   The fifth of these seven questions:

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 Does the selected option have a deadline? You can go to 2 the bus station anytime. However, if the choice is the 3 women's shelter you had better call right now because the 4 longer you wait the greater the chance that there aren't 5 going to be any beds. So ask yourself how quickly you
6 need to act. Some options can wait a while and others
7 the wheels should be put in motion even before you talk 8 about the most urgent problem.

9                   The sixth of these seven questions:
10 What are the steps in getting from here to the selected 11 option? Maybe there is only one or two, like telephoning 12 the women's shelter and going there if they have a bed.
13 Let's suppose the shelter is full then the next choice
14 is the friend of the family. There's probably a few steps 15 here. It may not be a matter of simply looking up the 16 phone number and calling. The first step is deciding what 17 she will say. What do you want to hear yourself saying 18 when you call? How much explanation of your situation 19 will you give? What exactly will you be asking from the 20 family friend?

21                   So, the first step is deciding what to 22 say. The second might be rehearsing the conversation.
23 The third step would be to call and then perhaps go over.

June 7, 1993*Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1                   The last of these seven questions: What 2   is the outcome of the selected option? Basically, how 3   did it turn out? Build in a mechanism to enable the client
4   to let you know. In our example, suppose the family friend 5   does work out and she has been invited to stay for a few 6   days. She could be asked: How about giving me a call 7   a little while after you get there and we can talk about 8   how it's working out? Or, can I give you a call a little 9   while after you get there and we can talk about how it's 10  working out?

11                  Do make sure some sort of follow- up 12  mechanism is built in. After all, suppose the family 13  friend's wife and children departed the scene six months 14  ago and he hasn't bothered to mention this to her. Maybe 15  this would alter the attractiveness of the option.

16                  Let me summarize what this seven 17  question process is intended to accomplish. Where we have 18  started out with a huge overwhelming terrifying mess from 19  the standpoint of the client, the first thing we've done 20  is we've broken this mess down into five problems, five 21  separate pieces. Second, we decided on the priority of 22  each problem. And third, using our highest priority 23  problem as an example, we have identified four options

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 available to address the problem.

2                   Next, we have made a decision about which 3 option should be pursued. Fifth, we have assessed the 4 deadline of the selected option. Sixth, we have 5 identified and then followed the several steps involved 6 in exercising the option. Seventh, and final, we have 7 identified the mechanism to assess the outcome of the 8 option and constructed some arrangements to enable this 9 to occur.

10                   In general, what we have done is we have 11 taken a large package and we've broken it into several 12 pieces. We then have taken each of the several pieces 13 and reduced them to still smaller steps. As a rule, any 14 time you can take a large package and help a client reduce 15 it to two or more smaller packages the client has been 16 well served.

17                   In conclusion, and yes we are getting 18 near the end of this, let me leave you with some food for 19 thought. We are just about to have some other kind of 20 food, let me give you a bit of a different kind of food 21 first.

22                   Last month I had the opportunity to 23 address the Royal Commission at the Commission's hearings

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 in North Bay. I offered the Commission two general
2 conclusions about mental health services in the Aboriginal 3 community.

4 One of these two conclusions strongly 5 emphasized that the mental health services provided to 6 the Aboriginal community should be delivered by Aboriginal 7 personnel. Why? Because the Aboriginal practitioner 8 represents the blend of clinical expertise and cultural 9 background as the situation requires. The Aboriginal 10 practitioner has credibility in the community.

11 Now, if the desired model emphasizes 12 Aboriginal practitioners serving Aboriginal clients, we 13 have a pragmatic problem. At present there is quite an 14 extreme shortage of trained Aboriginal service providers
15 in the mental health field. One of my students working 16 with me in North Bay, who is a member of the Aboriginal 17 community, tells me that there are only three Native 18 psychologists in all of Canada. That is not very many.

19 So, what we have then is a rather 20 substantial training issue, but how much training is 21 required to make a meaningful difference? Not to solve 22 every problem that I can put forward to make a difference.

23 About 10 years ago I had the opportunity

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 to work at the Crisis Intervention Centre at the Toronto
2 East General Hospital and in that setting volunteers 3 attached to this program were able to provide an excellent 4 crisis intervention service to people presented to the 5 hospital's emergency room after receiving six three hour
6 training sessions. Six.

7 I would emphasize that the majority of 8 volunteers had little or no prior clinical training or 9 experience. What they did have was interest, concern and 10 a desire to make a contribution. Professional staff 11 provided back-up consultations by telephone when difficult 12 clinical situations arose or when guidance or direction 13 were required.

14 Even in remote northern communities such 15 professional back-up is potentially available by 16 telephone, notwithstanding the problems we've heard about 17 earlier this morning in terms of language and in terms 18 of collect calls and that sort of thing. It is potentially 19 available.

20 Let's now ask a little bit about how 21 non-Aboriginal practitioners tend to serve Aboriginal 22 communities at present. Historically I think what has 23 happened is the non-Aboriginal practitioner has been

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 parachuted into the Aboriginal community to provide one
2 sort of clinical service or another. Now, there are a 3 lot of limitations with this model, including a lack of 4 continuity and care, detachment from the community,
5 detachment from the culture, et cetera.

6                   If the non-Aboriginal practitioner is 7 going to be involved, perhaps that person should have a 8 much more meaningful role as an educational consultant 9 rather than as a clinical practitioner.

10                   In a model like this, training would be 11 provided to members of the Aboriginal community to enable 12 them to offer services on a volunteer basis. What this 13 would require is a curriculum planning process in which 14 the Aboriginal community participates fully. The 15 community would have to tell the practitioner what it is 16 you would hope to get from that person. It would be a 17 partnership between non-Aboriginal practitioners and the 18 Aboriginal community.

19                   Can volunteers make a meaningful 20 difference in the areas of suicide prevention and crisis 21 intervention? They certainly can and I've seen them do 22 it.

23                   I'm sure you're all very hungry. That's

1 all I have to say.

2 Thank you for your kind attention.

3 --- Upon recessing at 12:55 p.m.

4 --- Upon resuming at 5:00 p.m.

5 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: If we 6 could just have a short report from the four groups, not 7 necessarily reading the recommendations, but if you can 8 talk about some of the common themes and threads that were 9 put forward within your workshop.

10 If we could start with the Native Women's 11 Association, please. The representative for the Native 12 Women's Association -- okay then we'll move over to the 13 Native Council of Canada.

14 Nelson, are you out in the hallway?

15 NELSON MAYER, NATIVE COUNCIL OF CANADA:

16 No, I'm not.

17 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: He always 18 looks so guilty.

19 Nelson, do you want to come up.

20 NELSON MAYER: This is just a very short 21 summary of the activity in our group and then we will be 22 working tonight on the full report and providing our report 23 along with the recommendations tomorrow.

June 7, 1993*Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1                   In summary, our group first began by 2   reviewing the questions that were in the package. In some 3   of the discussions that came out it was noted that there 4   is a lot of anger still with respect to the issue of 5   suicides, the results of the colonization process, and 6   the impact that it's had on our community because we had 7   front line workers and people who had actual experience 8   on a daily basis of working with people who have been 9   affected and continually they face the issues of suicide.

10                  The other underlying thing as well is 11   the family violence, the sexual abuse and the list goes 12   on and on. So, a lot of the session was on that.

13                  After the coffee break we started into 14   some of the specific recommendations. The common theme 15   that seems to be running around is that government control 16   seems to be number one, with respect to our types of 17   programming. It needs to be designed, developed and 18   delivered by the Aboriginal communities and Aboriginal 19   people.

20                  Another thought was with respect to 21   adequate resourcing to make these programs effective and 22   to make them work. Another thought was directed towards 23   recommendations, towards national leadership. It was

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 felt that, I think, the summation of the two with respect
2 to national leadership is number one, first and foremost.

3 It is the responsibility of the national leadership to 4 set an example in terms of role models, behaviours and 5 to basically walk the talk when we talk about being 6 responsible and accountable to our communities, and not 7 perpetuating the myths or the images of Aboriginal people 8 in this country where they talk about drunken Indians.

9                   It's unfortunate that some of our 10 leadership, when you see them at meetings -- and this young 11 person who was in our group stated it best when she said 12 that when you see an unhealthy mind how can you expect 13 them to make healthy decisions. So, that was well said 14 by the young person in our group.

15                   The second point would be that in terms 16 of priorities we know that the constitutional issues are 17 important. We know that the economic development issues 18 are important and everything, but it seems that continually 19 the health and wellness of our people is at the bottom
20 of the pile in terms of their priorities. It is stated 21 that if we have healthy people the rest will flow from 22 that.

23                   That would basically be our report.

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 Thank you.

2 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
3 very much, Nelson.

4 Joey, do you want to do your report for 5 your group or the person that facilitated that session?

6 JOEY HAMELIN: Cheryl.

7 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Is Cheryl 8 here?

9 Cheryl is not here so we will move to 10 the Inuit group, Tapirisat.

11 DEBBIE KLENGENBERG, INUIT TAPIRISAT OF 12 CANADA: I will try to make this as short as possible and 13 hopefully shorter than our session went because we kind 14 of got bogged down in a few places.

15 The overall underlying thought was that 16 this whole idea of this get-together was most helpful and 17 a great opportunity for everybody to get together and share 18 ideas, information, experiences, et cetera. It seems that 19 everyone is feeling a lot of pressure to cram everything 20 into a day and a half, so maybe to have another one some 21 time in the future would be most helpful.

22 Again, it went back down to education 23 at the local level, training local people to deliver the

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 programs, the support services, and the services offered 2 instead of relying on people to come up from outside and 3 be the resource people.

4                   The lack of funding -- what Nelson said
5 was really what we also said in a different version. We 6 know the Constitution is important and we know that all 7 these things are important, but promoting wellness and 8 providing that actual service to get our people well again
9 is not being looked at. It is not considered an important 10 enough issue.

11                   We talked about what things are working 12 in various communities, such as various crisis lines in 13 some of the regions that are working and promoting 14 spirituality and cultural awareness, et cetera.

15                   We are not nearly finished and we're 16 going to be doing some more work, but that would be the 17 gist of our report and we'll get more in-depth later.

18                   Thank you.

19                   MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
20 very much.

21                   The facilitator for the Native Women's 22 Association.

23                   RUTH NORTON, NATIVE WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 OF CANADA: I guess we will have a full report of what 2 we've discussed today on the two issues, however the 3 emphasis was on community and community-based programming
4 which would assist the communities themselves.

5                   The underlying message that was talked 6 about and given at our workshop was that community people
7 have to do it themselves. They themselves have to start 8 believing that they are the only ones that can begin the 9 whole process of healing and the whole process of 10 preventing our young people and people from committing 11 suicide.

12                   There were many recommendations that 13 came from the group. What we had was a circle where each 14 one had input into the discussion. A lot of the women 15 that were in our group were front-line workers and we had 16 our elder with us. They all had a lot to contribute.

17                   The other facilitators also talked about 18 some of the things that we touched on, namely the whole 19 history of colonialism and the impact of it, and the fact 20 that our young people are angry and so on. There is a 21 lot of anger out there.

22                   We also talked about processes, a 23 process within the community itself, a process that needs

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 to occur at the regional level. A process that has to 2 occur throughout the national area and our people to work 3 together in that process. So, we talked about the 4 different levels of what we had to do to prevent suicide
5 among our young people.

6 The last session we went through three 7 of the major questions. They all had an input into it.
8 Tomorrow we will be providing you with a comprehensive 9 report on what we talked about.

10 The strong, strong message that came out 11 in our circle was that our own people have to start 12 believing in themselves and they can't look outside to 13 heal what is bothering the people inside the community.
14 The government's role is to provide adequate resources 15 so that sessions like this occur in every community. The 16 government must have resources to provide community-based 17 workshops for every level, every generation, the youth, 18 the very young, the middle age, and also the elders.

19 Also, a strong message in our group was 20 that our people have their own resources, their own ways 21 of doing things, their own methods of dealing with issues 22 such as suicide and that has to be respected by the 23 government -- both governments. That message was really

June 7, 1993

Royal Commission on
Aboriginal Peoples
Ottawa, Ontario

1 loud and clear.

2 Tomorrow we will have the report, like
3 I said.

4 Thank you very much.

5 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Thank you
6 very much.

7 Is the facilitator for the Métis group
8 back yet?

9 JOEY HAMELIN, METIS NATIONAL COUNCIL:
10 I'll go ahead.

11 MAGGIE HODGSON, CHAIRPERSON: Go ahead,
12 Joey.

13 JOEY HAMELIN: It seems to be a common
14 theme that we're hearing and one of the very strong themes 15 is empowerment. In order to empower our communities we 16 have to begin to respect each other and acknowledge that 17 we have expertise within our own communities.

18 One of our recommendations was that we 19 need to pay attention to our elders and that we need to 20 connect with our elders in terms of providing us with 21 guidance and direction in our future program planning.
22 Also, vice versa, as technicians we also need to listen
23 to the needs of our seniors and elders in our communities.

1                   The other thing was that we needed to 2   educate our communities, ourselves, towards the acceptance
3   of lesbian and gay people. The other items -- and I will 4   just go through this quickly   -- we found that that was 5   very important, that we shouldn't exclude lesbian or gay 6   people.

7                   Also, we highly emphasize female
8   leadership, particularly when we need our issues addressed 9   at other levels, particularly in the political arena, that 10   when we need follow-up or a change in policies or promoting 11   changes within policies that we would strongly promote 12   that our female leadership should keep pushing.

13                  This is not to say that our male 14   leadership shouldn't make our social issues or suicide
15   prevention or sexual abuse and don't treat it as equal 16   as the Constitution, but we felt that female leadership 17   would enable this process.

18                  The other recommendation was a holistic 19   and creative solution to our community problems and that 20   would be developed within our specific communities and 21   not to leave our spirituality out of that process.

22                  Our other recommendation, again as I
23   mentioned earlier, was to count on our own community

1 resources and our own expertise. Again, it was highly 2 emphasized that we consult and collaborate with our elders.

3                   Our other recommendation was that we 4 need a follow-up by our leadership. When we have 5 conferences or workshops or whatever sometimes we can blame 6 -- when there is research conducted by whomever, the 7 governments or whomever -- that the research is left on 8 the shelves. Sometimes we find that our own leadership 9 can also -- when we do our own conferences we need to ensure 10 that there is follow-up and action to those specific 11 recommendations that affect our communities.

12                   Another strong point was the networking, 13 that we needed to network amongst ourselves so that we 14 can begin to share with each other our initiatives that 15 we've initiated, and to share our limitations with or -- 16 not to use the word failure, but our limitations within 17 our programs that we've designed ourselves.

18                   Also, to share the strengths so that we 19 wouldn't have to duplicate programs or services and to 20 know that we are not out there by ourselves, that there 21 is a large number of us out there and that we need to provide 22 support with each other because of the challenges that 23 this type of field -- the many challenges that we have

1 to deal with as technicians.

2 Our other recommendation was that we 3 needed a national strategy with local input and that the 4 community -- we need to consult or collaborate or that 5 it has to be community driven, but that we have a national 6 plan or strategy in place so that we have some guidelines 7 that we can follow.

8 The other thing was to trust ourselves
9 and to trust our own people, that through this process 10 is the sense of empowerment. To have Métis-specific 11 programs designed, delivered, implemented and evaluated
12 by Métis technicians and that there be funding allotted 13 specifically to design and develop and implement these 14 programs.

15 We felt very strongly that we needed to 16 conduct our own research, and that kind of ties in with 17 data collection and also ties in with policy development.
18 We need funding to conduct our own research and we felt 19 that we have the expertise within our own communities to 20 conduct this research.

21 That was about it.

22 Thank you.

1 very much, Joey.

2 I'm going to go over the announcements
3 that I made before because some of the people weren't in 4 the room.

5 The papers that Adamie Sallualuk offered
6 are out on the table for those people who are interested.
7 It is on suicide intervention from his region and some 8 research that they did.

9 The sharing circle will be held here at 10 7:00 a.m..

11 The facilitators meeting is at 7:00 in 12 the York Room.

13 We will be commencing tomorrow morning 14 at 9:00 and while we started late this morning because 15 of people having arrived yesterday, et cetera, we are going 16 to be starting at 9:00 sharp tomorrow morning. If you
17 are here, you're here, that's good. If you're not here, 18 we're going to start anyway. So, I know you will be 19 respecting the 9:00 start time.

20 That's the end of it.

21 Mrs. Jock, if you could come and say the 22 closing prayer, please.
