On the morning of the 4th April 1918, I heard an explosion at the same post, at which platoon A. G.'s was situated, on ~~to~~ investigating, I found Pte Goldsborough shot through the temple, the bullet having penetrated his steel helmet. Upon making enquiry, I found that Pte Hanbury had fired his rifle while cleaning it. I questioned Pte Hanbury & he stated that he had not been instructed as to cleaning a rifle when using live ammunition. A G Graham

On the night of the 2nd April, about 7 p.m. I reported to the 29th P.M. detail camp, with a draft of 109 O.P.s and remained for the night at the detail camp.

I questioned a number of the draft who had never had previous experience in France, and they all stated that it was only through having had previous experience with fire-arms in civilian life or with Territorial Regiments, that they had gained knowledge in cleaning a Rifle. All the training in musketry that they have had since they joined in the late fall of 1917, amounted to one week preliminary musketry and one week on the ranges.
