Neurologist's Report

Dec. 11th, 1918.

This Officer at the present time shows no signs of organic injury to the brain tissue nor to the cranial nerves by the fracture of the skull he sustained in October 1917.

He has certain degree of Neurasthenia of the type characteristic of head injuries, viz:-

1. Headaches. These are not of the severity which prostrate him, nor should they interfere with the prosecution of his civil occupation. There is no evidence that they are due to increased intracranial pressure, nor to any other organic cause, in active operation at the present time.

2. Lack of concentration at any work that he attempts. This is not marked, and, if he resumed his civil occupation, would be improved by the interest in his work.

3. Complains also of general weakness. There is no discoverable organic disease in any of his systems to account for this, and it is to be regarded as due to a general asthenia. This is of mild character and will tend to disappear.

4. Dreams, usually of battle scenes still disturb him at night. These are less frequent than formerly, and not as distressing.

On account of the steady improvement that he has been making, the comparatively trivial severity of his symptoms as compared with their former severity, his desire and ability to return to civil occupation, I should consider that he would be better thus employed than remaining in hospital. Further military service might be expected to prolong his slight disability, or even to produce a relapse.

I should recommend his discharge from the Army, and his immediate return to civil occupation.

I do not consider that he has a pensionable disability at present.
