OFFICIAL LANGUAGES IN CANADA: FEDERAL POLICY*

1 INTRODUCTION

The legal protection of English and French is rooted in the British North America Act. Section 133 of this Act allowed for the use of English and French in parliamentary debates and court proceedings, as well as in the printing and publication of laws by the Parliament of Canada and the Legislature of Quebec. In 1969, the federal government established a more formal framework for the use of English and French in its very first Official Languages Act, consequent to the Royal Commission of Inquiry on Bilingualism and Biculturalism's recommendations.

The enshrinement of language rights in the Constitution in 1982 opened a new chapter in the evolution of these rights in Canada. Since that time, language issues have continued to attract public interest and have even created tension. On the one hand, demands for implementation and full enforcement of the language rights protected under the Constitution have given rise to conflicts between official language minorities and their respective provincial governments; from time to time, these conflicts have resulted in legal challenges, some of which have reached the Supreme Court. On the other hand, a significant majority of Canadians continue to base their attitudes toward Canada's linguistic duality on false perceptions of federal official languages policy. This means that opposition to so-called official bilingualism has crystallized into a perception that bilingualism is imposed on all Canadians; however, since the obligations under the Official Languages Act apply first and foremost to federal institutions, the federal approach to official languages is based on the principle of institutional bilingualism.

Institutional bilingualism is the capacity of the government and its institutions to communicate with the public, and within these institutions, in the two official languages. According to the Canadian model, the responsibility assumed by the federal government to communicate with its citizens is coupled with a commitment to serve its citizens in their own official language. Having adopted French and English as official languages, the government recognizes that it must adjust linguistically to the needs of the public. In doing so, the government confirms that it is not incumbent on citizens to adjust linguistically to the workings of government.

This document examines four main issues:

- the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and its effects on language matters;
- implementation of the Official Languages Program in federal institutions;
- implementation of Part VII of the Official Languages Act; and
- the renewed commitment of the Government of Canada with respect to official languages.

A brief chronology and a selected bibliography are also provided.

2 THE CHARTER AND ITS EFFECTS ON LANGUAGE MATTERS

2.1 LANGUAGE RIGHTS PROTECTED UNDER THE CONSTITUTION

With the passage of the Constitution Act, 1982, the concept of official languages was enshrined in the Constitution. Section 16 of the *Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms*¹ (the Charter) establishes English and French as the official languages of Canada and confers equal status and equal rights and privileges with respect to their use in the institutions of the Parliament and the Government of Canada. Sections 17, 18 and 19 set out the principle of equality of the two official languages in the proceedings of Parliament, in parliamentary papers, and in courts established by Parliament. Section 20 deals with the use of English or French in communications between federal institutions and members of the public. Section 23 deals with minority language education rights. In addition, section 24 provides that anyone whose Charter-protected rights or freedoms have been infringed upon or denied may apply to a court of competent jurisdiction to obtain a remedy.

At the express request of New Brunswick, sections 16 through 20 of the Charter apply to that province; however, for section 20, an important exception applies, i.e., the right to receive communications or services from any office of an institution of the Legislature or Government of New Brunswick in English or French is not subject to any limitation based on sufficient demand or the nature of the office. As well, a constitutional amendment was passed by the Legislative Assembly of New Brunswick in December 1992 and by the Parliament of Canada in February 1993. This amendment to the Charter extends New Brunswick's Act Recognizing the Equality of the Two Official Linguistic Communities, passed in 1981 by the Legislative Assembly of that province by proclaiming that New Brunswick's English-speaking and French-speaking linguistic communities have equal status, rights and privileges – in particular, the right to the separate educational and cultural institutions necessary to preserve and promote those rights and privileges. The amendment also confirms the role of the Legislature and Government of New Brunswick in preserving and promoting this status and these rights and privileges.

2.2 INTERPRETATION AND IMPLEMENTATION OF LANGUAGE RIGHTS PROTECTED UNDER THE CONSTITUTION²

As might be expected, the years following the coming into force of the Charter were characterized by numerous court challenges aimed at enforcing the spirit and the letter of the supreme law of Canada with respect to language rights.

The Court Challenges Program was essential to the development of jurisprudence relating to language rights protected under the Constitution. This program, introduced in 1978, provided financial assistance to official language minorities wishing to have their constitutional rights clarified and asserted through the courts (section 133 of the Constitution Act, 1867 and the Manitoba Act, 1870); since 1982, it has also covered the language rights set out in sections 16 through 23 of the Charter. Lastly, since 1985, it has also applied to individuals and groups that have challenged federal legislation, policies and practices in test cases invoking section 15 of the Charter, concerning equality rights; section 27, on Canadians' multicultural heritage; and section 28, on equality of the sexes. The program, funded by the federal government, has been brought to bear on test cases of national importance. For example, it helped ensure that French-speaking Manitobans' language rights, which had been denied since the adoption of Manitoba's Official Language Act of 1890, were recognized by the courts and the Legislative Assembly of Manitoba; it also furthered the battle to enforce the minority language education rights enshrined in section 23 of the Charter.

The Court Challenges Program was cancelled initially in February 1992, and then restored in October 1994. It was cancelled again in September 2006, and partially reinstated in June 2008, as a result of an out-of-court settlement between the Fédération des communautés francophones et acadienne du Canada (Federation of Francophone and Acadian Communities in Canada), which had challenged the cancellation of the program, and the Government of Canada. The new Language Rights Support Program, which came into being in December 2009, is designed for language-related test cases only. It focuses on alternative dispute resolution processes, while allowing support for litigation.

3 IMPLEMENTATION OF THE OFFICIAL LANGUAGES PROGRAM IN FEDERAL INSTITUTIONS

3.1 THE OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT, 1988³

The Official Languages Act of 1969 followed upon the recommendations of the Royal Commission of Inquiry on Bilingualism and Biculturalism to broaden the scope and application of section 133 of the Constitution Act, 1867. Its purpose was to give English and French equal status, not only in Parliament and before the courts of Canada (as provided by section 133), but throughout the federal administration as well.

The Official Languages Act had not been amended since its passage in 1969, despite several requests by the Standing Joint Committee on Official Languages and the Office of the Commissioner of Official Languages. The coming into force of the Charter in 1982 made reform more urgent. The government had to adapt federal legislation to the Charter, and it had to define the terms and conditions of implementing the Charter. It also wished to provide a broader legislative basis for its language policies and programs. In light of the scope of the amendments being considered, the government opted to repeal the existing statute and replace it with Bill C-72. The new statute, adopted in 1988, is also entitled the *Official Languages Act*⁴ (the OLA).

Parliament remedied one weakness of the former statute – its declaratory nature – by making the OLA enforceable. The OLA provides for judicial remedy through the Federal Court; under certain conditions, a plaintiff may apply for a remedy either alone or jointly with the Commissioner, who is also authorized to apply to the Court for a remedy.

A general provision corrects another shortcoming of the former statute, i.e., its lack of primacy over other federal statutes. This general provision states that the provisions of Parts I to V of the OLA – which deal with the proceedings of Parliament, legislative and other instruments, the administration of justice, communications with and services to the public, and language of work – have primacy over all other federal legislation or regulations except the Canadian Human Rights Act because the principles underlying these Parts flow directly from the Constitution.

The OLA requires the Minister of Canadian Heritage and the President of the Treasury Board, to report annually to Parliament on their respective responsibilities concerning official languages. It also requires Parliament to strike a parliamentary committee specifically responsible for following up on the implementation of the OLA and its accompanying regulations and instructions, and on the implementation of reports by the commissioner of Official Languages, the President of the Treasury Board, and the Minister of Canadian Heritage.

3.2 OFFICIAL LANGUAGES IN THE FEDERAL PUBLIC SERVICE⁵

The OLA sets out three broad principles with respect to official languages in the federal public service:

- the public's right to communicate with and be served by federal institutions in the language of choice of those being served (Part IV);
- the right of employees of federal institutions to work in the official language of their choice (Part V); and
- the government's commitment to provide equal opportunities to English-speaking and French-speaking Canadians in federal institutions (Part VI).

The federal public service designates a certain percentage of its positions as bilingual by taking into account obligations with respect to services to the public and language of work. The government designated a certain number of bilingual regions for language-of-work purposes. It undertook to draw up regulations on communication with and services to the public after the 1988 OLA was passed.

3.3 THE OFFICIAL LANGUAGES (COMMUNICATIONS WITH AND SERVICES TO THE PUBLIC) REGULATIONS

The OLA defines the responsibilities of federal institutions concerning communication with and services to the public. The government adopted the Official Languages (Communications with and Services to the Public) Regulations⁶ on 16 December 1991, concluding a parliamentary process that had begun on 8 November 1990 with the tabling of proposed draft regulations in the House of Commons. The Regulations clarify the linguistic obligations of federal organizations and specify the circumstances in which Canadians may expect to be served in the official language of their choice.

The Regulations complete key provisions of the OLA concerning federal offices where there is "significant demand" for service in both official languages; federal offices where the “nature of the office” makes service in both official languages reasonable; and, contracted services for travellers.

The Regulations relating to “significant demand” include provisions based on the most recent decennial census data on the size of the minorities (either absolute size, or number and proportion, whichever is appropriate) and, where local demographic data are not relevant, provisions based on the volume of demand in the minority language. The Regulations on the “nature of the office” apply to specific federal services, regardless of level of demand, and include provisions on health and safety signage, national parks, embassies, the main federal offices located in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon, and popular national or international exhibitions.

The Regulations on contracted services at facilities for travellers apply to federal airports, railway stations and ferry terminals where demand is significant. Services covered include restaurant, car rental, foreign exchange and air carrier services provided at these facilities. The Regulations also specify the terms and conditions of providing these services.

The Regulations apply to all institutions covered by the Official Languages Act, including departments, Crown corporations, and Air Canada (under the Air Canada Public Participation Act). They do not apply to federal offices located in the National Capital Region or to federal head offices, both of which are already required to serve the public in both official languages by a provision of the OLA.

Many federal institutions still have trouble ensuring that the provision of services of equal quality in both English and French are integral to their corporate culture. In his most recent annual reports, Commissioner Graham Fraser noted that while there had been progress in some institutions, some problems continued to occur, in particular in relation to written communication, active offer and services to the travelling public. Year after year, most of the complaints received by the OCOL relate to services to the public.

In October 2006, the government published draft regulations in the Canada Gazette in response to a Federal Court of Canada order in Doucet v. Canada.⁷ The object of these draft regulations was to amend the Regulations such that a Royal Canadian Mounted Police detachment (in Amherst, Nova Scotia) would be required to offer bilingual services. Commissioner Fraser and the Senate Standing Committee on Official Languages were of the opinion that these draft regulations took a minimalist approach. Along with a great many minority community organizations, they wanted the government to undertake a thorough revision of the Regulations to better reflect current realities and to ensure that members of the public receive services of equal quality in the official language of their choice. The government amended the Regulations in 2007 to comply with the order of the Federal Court, but has made no formal commitment to undertake a major revision of the Regulations.

In the fall of 2009, the Fédération des communautés francophones et acadienne du Canada argued for the implementation of comprehensive official languages regulations that would address not only the offer of services in both official languages, but also the capacity for public servants to work in their own language and the support for official-language minority communities.

Later the same year, the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada in *Desrochers*⁸ emphasized the importance that services offered be of equal quality in both official languages. This ruling held that the government must take the necessary steps to ensure that Francophones and Anglophones contribute equally to the definition and delivery of services.

On 9 June 2010, Bill S-220, An Act to amend the Official Languages Act (communications with and services to the public)⁹ was introduced in the Senate. This bill provided for a series of amendments to the OLA to clarify the duties of the federal government in relation to Part IV, including the provisions that govern the making of the Regulations. The bill died on the Order Paper.

3.4 REVIEW OF THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA'S OFFICIAL LANGUAGES POLICIES

A review of official languages policies began in the summer of 2002 and was concluded in the summer of 2005. This renewal exercise sought to reduce the number and clarify the function of policies relating to official languages.

Twenty-two policy instruments were reduced to:

- one framework (Official Languages Policy Framework),
- three policies:
 - Policy on the Use of Official Languages for Communications with and Services to the Public,
 - Policy on Language of Work, and
 - Policy on Official Languages for Human Resources Management
- and six directives:
 - Directive on the Use of Official Languages on Web Sites,
 - Directive on the Use of Official Languages in Electronic Communications,
 - Directive on the Linguistic Identification of Positions or Functions,
 - Directive on the Staffing of Bilingual Positions,
 - Bilingualism Bonus Directive, and
 - Directives for Implementing the Official Languages Regulations.

It should be noted that all federal institutions are now subject to official languages policies, with the exception of the Senate, the House of Commons, the Library of Parliament, the Office of the Senate Ethics Officer and the Office of the Conflict of Interest and Ethics Commissioner. While the directives are not mandatory, they clarify the procedures for implementing these policies.

The new policies introduce significant changes to bilingualism standards in the federal public service. First, imperative staffing¹⁰ is the norm for all bilingual positions. The new policies also tighten the rules on bilingualism for managers in the federal public service: all bilingual positions must be filled by "bilingual persons." Imperative staffing becomes mandatory for the staffing of bilingual positions at the EX-05 to EX-02 levels in bilingual regions, and also in unilingual regions if the incumbents supervise staff who hold bilingual positions in bilingual regions.

The changes also affect language training, which becomes a professional development tool for employees who want to advance their careers and eventually fill a bilingual position. Institutions are called upon to encourage this type of training and integrate it into employees' professional development plans, taking into account available resources. Members of the EX category who are appointed to bilingual non-imperative positions are typically necessary to take any required language training before assuming the duties of their new position. Non-EX employees appointed to bilingual non-imperative positions are required to take language training as soon as possible after their appointment.

Despite those changes, some federal institutions have difficulty meeting their obligations with respect to services to the public, language of work or equitable participation of English-speaking and French-speaking Canadians. There are many possible reasons for this:

- The requirements of the OLA are sometimes misunderstood.
- Some federal institutions are not committed to implementing the provisions of the Act.
- Other institutions seem to lack sufficient planning in this regard or fail to monitor the impact of some of their actions.

4 IMPLEMENTATION OF PART VII OF THE OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT

4.1 STRENGTHENING PART VII OF THE OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT

Section 41 of the Official Languages Act sets out the federal government's commitment to "enhancing the vitality of the English and French linguistic minority communities in Canada and supporting and assisting their development and fostering the full recognition and use of both English and French in Canadian society." This section of the OLA has been the subject of considerable debate and interpretation since 1988. The Office of the Commissioner of Official Languages has repeatedly expressed dissatisfaction with the implementation of Part VII of the OLA.

On four occasions between 2001 and 2005, a private member's bill was introduced in the Senate to strengthen the binding nature of federal institutions' responsibilities under Part VII of the OLA. The bill died on the Order Paper three times. The Act to amend the Official Languages Act (promotion of English and French) finally received Royal Assent on 25 November 2005. Three amendments, which apply to all federal institutions, were made to the OLA:

- Federal institutions must take positive measures to implement section 41 in order to strengthen and give practical effect to this commitment. This implementation must be in accordance with the provinces' areas of jurisdiction.

- The Governor in Council (i.e., the Governor General on the cabinet's advice) may make regulations stipulating how federal institutions shall fulfil their obligations under Part VII.
- The obligations set out in Part VII are subject to legal remedy.

4.2 THE DEPARTMENT OF CANADIAN HERITAGE'S OFFICIAL LANGUAGES SUPPORT PROGRAMS

Under section 42 of the OLA, the minister of Canadian Heritage is responsible for encouraging and promoting a coordinated approach to the fulfilment of the commitments of federal institutions as set out in section 41. Currently, the Department of Canadian Heritage fulfills its responsibilities through programs and activities in two broad areas: development of official language communities and promotion of official languages. These areas are served by three broad types of programs: minority-language education and second language learning, community life, and promotion of linguistic duality.

4.2.1 MINORITY-LANGUAGE EDUCATION AND SECOND LANGUAGE LEARNING

Since 1970, the federal government has cooperated with the provinces to allow members of the official language minority communities to study in their own language and to enable young Canadians to learn French or English as a second language. Federal-provincial-territorial agreements in the area of education are the largest official languages investment of the Department of Canadian Heritage. Under bilateral agreements, the federal government reimburses the provincial and territorial governments for part of the additional expenditures they incur to provide education in the minority official language (programs and services, program development, teaching materials, teacher training, and student assistance) and to allow students who speak the majority official language (Francophones in Quebec and Anglophones in the rest of the country) to learn their second official language.

These agreements entail action plans with performance indicators that are intended to keep the public apprised of the measures implemented and results achieved in the area of official languages education. The action plan approach was adopted in February 2000 in response to ongoing criticism concerning a lack of accountability on the part of provincial governments and a lack of information available to the public with regard to the use of federal funds and the results achieved.

A protocol governs the general functioning of the federal government's commitment in education and determines its financial investment. The protocol is signed with the Council of Ministers of Education (Canada), the body that represents the interests of the provinces and territories with respect to education in their dealings with the federal government and abroad. The current protocol covers the fiscal years 2009–2010 to 2012–2013 and commits the Department of Canadian Heritage to provide $1.03 billion in funding. The federal government reserves the right to approve additional contributions for the enhancement of second language programs at all levels, development and innovation in post-secondary minority education, infrastructure projects or program quality and cultural enrichment in minority-language education at all levels.

4.2.2 COMMUNITY LIFE

The federal government funds provincial and territorial governments that want to create new services or improve existing services in the minority language and to promote greater understanding between the country's two linguistic communities. Multi-year agreements with the federal government with respect to health and social services, legal services and municipal affairs are in effect in almost every province and territory. Action plans describing planned measures and expected results are annexed to the bilateral agreements. These agreements are generally signed for a five-year period, and costs are shared equally between the two levels of government. The current bilateral agreements cover the fiscal years 2009–2010 to 2012–2013.

The federal government also offers direct support for official language minority communities. In 1994, the federal government launched a repositioning initiative that made it possible to institute new mechanisms for cooperation and funding in a context of diminishing resources. The new strategy uses "collaboration agreements" (formerly, Canada – Community agreements) to encourage individual communities to take greater control.

A collaboration agreement is an agreement reached between the Department of Canadian Heritage and an organization or organizations representing a provincial or territorial official language minority community. Such agreements set the amount of funding for the entire community and outline the department's commitments with respect to community development, federal – provincial cooperation and interdepartmental coordination. Such agreements also establish mechanisms through which community organizations together set their own priorities and suggest how available funds should be allocated. The current bilateral agreements cover the fiscal years 2009–2010 to 2012–2013.¹¹ Under the current system, a minimum of 20% of the funding must go to specific projects, while the balance goes toward the community organizations' annual activities.

4.2.3 PROMOTION OF LINGUISTIC DUALITY

The Department of Canadian Heritage funds a range of activities to promote linguistic duality and greater understanding between Anglophone and Francophone Canadians. These activities are divided into the following components: cooperation with the voluntary sector on promotion, support for volunteer organizations for interpretation and translation and support for innovation.

4.3 NATIONAL STRATEGY FOR THE IMPLEMENTATION OF SECTIONS 41 AND 42 OF THE OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT

On 16 August 1994, the Minister of Canadian Heritage announced that the cabinet had approved the establishment of an accountability framework for the implementation of sections 41 and 42 of the 1988 version of the OLA. This government initiative followed appeals by the Office of the Commissioner of Official Languages and organizations representing official language minority communities for more vigorous leadership by the Department of Canadian Heritage in fostering interdepartmental cooperation.

The announced measures concerned key institutions in areas of intervention that are vital to official language minority communities and that have the greatest impact on their development – notably, institutions involved in the areas of economic, human resource and cultural development. Some 30 designated institutions are required to develop an action plan for the implementation of section 41, taking into account the communities' specific needs. Ministers responsible for key institutions must submit these plans to the minister of Canadian Heritage and report to him or her once a year on the results attained. Finally, the minister of Canadian Heritage's annual report on official languages must highlight the action plan of each key federal institution and the results achieved during the previous year.¹²

The obligations under Part VII of the OLA are still not well understood. Commissioner Fraser's most recent annual reports showed that implementing Part VII of the OLA is a slow process. The Standing Senate Committee on Official Languages also demonstrated in its June 2010 report that there is still work to do to fully implement this Part of the OLA. The Senate Committee made 10 recommendations to the government in this regard.

5 RENEWED COMMITMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA TO OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

5.1 THE ACTION PLAN FOR OFFICIAL LANGUAGES (MARCH 2003)

On 25 April 2001, a minister responsible for official languages issues was named to the Cabinet for the first time. In carrying out his mandate, the Minister of Official Languages was to develop a new blueprint for action to strengthen the official languages program.

On 12 March 2003, after two years of consultations, the Minister announced the Action Plan for Official Languages (Action Plan), which revolved around three major axes: education, community development and the federal public service. Additional funding was announced for:

- minority-language education;
- second language learning;
- language industries;
- early childhood assistance;
- health;
- justice;
- immigration;
- economic development;
- strengthened partnership with the provinces and territories;
- assistance for community life; and
- strengthening bilingualism at all levels of the federal public service.

The Accountability and Coordination Framework, the main pillar of the Action Plan, made official languages a priority for the government and for public servants. It clarified the responsibilities of departments and agencies, and aimed to enhance coordination among the organizations involved. In financial terms, the federal government committed itself to investing $751.4 million over five years to support the implementation of the Action Plan. As shown in Table 1, half of that investment was devoted to education.

Table 1 – Financial Commitments of the Action Plan for Official Languages, 2003–2008

Department or Agency	Financial Commitment ($ millions)
Canadian Heritage
Education	$381.5
Community Support	$33.5
Treasury Board Secretariat	$64.6
Health Canada	$119.0
Human Resources Development Canada	$29.3
Industry Canada	$53.0
Justice Canada	$48.0
Citizenship and Immigration Canada	$9.0
Privy Council Office, Intergovernmental Affairs	$13.5
TOTAL	$751.4

Additional funds were added to the Action Plan between 2005 and 2007: an enabling fund for human resources development and community economic development ($36 million), further investments in health ($10.6 million) and funds to reduce waiting lists for language training ($12 million).

The government published its mid-term report on the implementation of the Action Plan in the fall of 2005. Progress varied from sector to sector and from province to province. Significant delays were noted in education, community services and early childhood development. The most obvious progress had been made in the health sector. The mid-term report included a management framework for the Official Languages Program in order to evaluate the measures taken and the results achieved through the Action Plan.

In May 2007, the House of Commons Standing Committee on Official Languages published a major study on the vitality of official language minority communities. The committee evaluated the impact of the Action Plan, which varied from sector to sector, and made 39 recommendations for action to be taken. At the same time, Commissioner Fraser recommended that the government continue the commitments set out in the Action Plan beyond 2008 and expand the scope of the Action Plan to include arts and culture, youth initiatives and new measures for promoting linguistic duality. In March 2008 the Standing Committee on Official Languages made further recommendations to the government regarding follow-up on the Action Plan, particularly in relation to the public service, language industries and access to justice.

Three evaluations of the coordination of the Action Plan were published: one in 2006, the second in 2007 and the third in 2008. The evaluators recommended that the Management and Accountability Framework be revised to reflect the changes that had occurred since 2003, and in particular the amendments to Part VII of the OLA and to the official languages governance structure. The evaluators also recommended that the Department of Canadian Heritage continue to play a lead role in coordinating consultations with official language minority communities. They recognized the important role of the Department of Justice's Official Languages Law Group, which plays a proactive part in monitoring and responding to legal issues relating to official languages.

5.2 THE ROADMAP FOR CANADA'S LINGUISTIC DUALITY (JUNE 2008)

On 3 December 2007, the Prime Minister of Canada assigned Bernard Lord the task of presiding over consultations with the aim of elaborating a strategy for the next phase of the Action Plan. In a consultation report published in February 2008, Mr. Lord set out 14 recommendations concerning the renewal of the commitment of the Government of Canada to official languages. He proposed that investments be made in the following sectors:

- education (minority-language, second language and postsecondary);
- immigration;
- health;
- arts and culture;
- promotion of linguistic duality;
- language industries;
- services in the minority language;
- communications and community media; and
- collaboration with the provinces and territories.

Mr. Lord proposed that the new strategy recognize regional differences and contain clear and measurable objectives, provide for strengthened consultation mechanisms and improved coordination and evaluation, and complement existing government actions by ensuring that any broad government strategy comply with Part VII of the OLA.

In June 2008, the Minister of Canadian Heritage unveiled the *Roadmap for Canada's Linguistic Duality 2008–2013: Acting for the Future*¹³ (Roadmap). The Roadmap provides for additional investments totalling $1.1 billion over five years, divided among 16 federal departments and agencies.¹⁴

It identifies five "priority sectors," which are:

- health;
- justice;
- immigration;

- economic development; and
- arts and culture.

The Roadmap also proposes investments in the language industry, translation and youth. The initiatives identified in the Roadmap are additions to the many components of the Official Languages Program. As in the case of the Action Plan for Official Languages, nearly half of the investments are devoted to education. Table 2 shows the financial commitments of each of the departments and agencies in question.

Table 2 – Financial Commitments in the Roadmap for Canada’s Linguistic Duality, 2008–2013

Department or Agency	Financial Commitment ($ millions)
Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency	$16.2
Canada School of Public Service	$2.5
Canadian Heritage
Education	$530.0
Support to communities	$81.0

National Research Council Canada	$10.0
Office of the Chief Human Resources Officer	$17.0
Public Works and Government Services Canada	$34.0
Western Economic Diversification Canada	$3.2
TOTAL	$1,109.8

In the fall of 2009, the government published a horizontal management and accountability framework¹⁵ to accompany the implementation of the Roadmap. The document announced that a horizontal summative evaluation will be held before the end of the initiative in March 2013.

6 CHRONOLOGY

- July 1969 – The Official Languages Act received Royal Assent.
- April 1970 – The first Commissioner of Official Languages, Keith Spicer, took up his duties.
- June 1973 – Parliament passed a special Resolution on Official Languages in the Public Service, reiterating the principles of the 1969 statute and confirming the right of public-sector workers to work in the official language of their choice.

- August 1977 – The second Commissioner of Official Languages, Maxwell Yalden, took up his duties.
- March 1978 – The Court Challenges Program was created.
- June 1978 – Bill C-42 received Royal Assent. It amended the Criminal Code to give accused persons the right to be heard by a judge or by a judge and a jury who speak their official language, whether this is English or French.
- May 1980 – Parliament created a Special Joint Committee on Official Languages, responsible for evaluating progress made in the 10 years since the passage of the Official Languages Act.
