CITY OF HAMILTON

Hamilton lies on the south shore of Burlington Bay, at the western extremity of Lake Ontario. It covers a space about two miles in length of the level which reaches from the Lake shore to the mountain, and is about a mile and a half in width. Away to the east stretches a section which has gained a wide celebrity as one of the finest fruit countries in the world; to the south, west and north, lies a fine rich agricultural territory; and to the north-east stretch the broad blue waters of Lake Ontario, whitened with the swelling canvas of a thousand ships, and bearing upon their bosom the commerce of two nations. The mountain is but the escarpment to the broad plateau of Western Ontario, worn down by the ceaseless dash of the waters of the ancient lake. It stretches away to the east, forming the precipices over which leap grandly the thundering Niagara and the dashing Genessee, and loses itself finally in the wild savagery of the Adirondacks. North west of the city are Burlington Heights, a tall wall of concrete, built up and cemented together by the action of the water, in the same way that Burlington Beach, which separates the Bay from the Lake, is now being compacted. On the Heights are still visible the breastworks thrown up during the war of 1812, whence issued the force under General Sheaffe, which fell upon Generals Winder and Chandler at Stoney Creek, captured them and routed their army. "Beautiful for situation," Hamilton has also many fine buildings, public and private; and the magnificent residences, surrounded by exquisitely kept grounds, in the outskirts of the city, have more than a usual celebrity.

The site of the City of Hamilton was originally covered with a dense growth of tall, coarse, serrated Indian grass. The land between the mountain and the bay consisted chiefly of deep ravines and patches of swamp, affording a favorite haunt for rattlesnakes, which at one time abounded here, frogs and quail. The monotony of the immense patches of the Indian grass was relieved here and there by a tall water elm and close, low and almost impenetrable shrubbery, which formed a safe retreat for packs of wolves. On the plot now occupied as the Market Square there was a particularly dense growth of this thicket which was the rendezvous of wolves innumerable. When this part of Canada was first settled a deer trail extended over the brow of the mountain, past where the reservoir is now situated, to the bay. An Indian trail extended from the villages on the Grand River through the Dundas Valley down to the bay near the foot of Emerald street, near which the Indians had a burial mound, where it is probable their chiefs were interred. This mound was fifteen feet high and fifty in diameter. The sides were steep and there was a hollow in the top. It was covered with ashes and cinders about two feet deep, the remains of fires made to destroy the scent of the bodies and preserve them from the wolves. Though almost levelled now by nearly a century of cultivation the remains of this mound can still be traced. A large number of mortuary remains, flint, spear and arrow-heads, stone hatchets, wampum, pottery, etc., seems to indicate that this was the scene of a sanguinary conflict many years ago. This view is strengthened by a tradition among the Indians that a small tribe called the Attawandaronks was here completely destroyed.

In the year 1778 ROBERT LAND who was born on the banks of the Delaware, and who sided with the British during the revolutionary war, settled on three hundred acres occupying the greater part of the east end of the city between the mountain and the bay. Previous to this he had located two hundred acres near Niagara Falls, but hearing that game was plentiful near the head of the lake he abandoned his first settlement for the Hamilton site, where he sowed the first wheat on an acre of ground, breaking up the land with hoes and harrowing it with brush loaded with stones. The dwelling was a small log cabin, with an earthen floor, and plastered with clay and roofed with birch bark, and the interstices were filled with a soft, dense moss found in great plenty in the swamps. A fire place extended the whole length of the house. A stretched wolf skin, denuded of its hair, answered the purpose of the solitary window. Dried venison hung from the ceiling at all times, and the pioneer's trusty companion, the rifle, was carefully suspended when not needed, over the fire place. This dwelling was a model one at the time, and in such the early settlers of the country reared their sturdy families, untrammelled by the dictates of fashion, and not at all envious of their neighbors. These primitive times, notwithstanding their many deprivations and vicissitudes, had a charm about them which the prosperity of succeeding years did not bestow, and we have heard many an old settler, surrounded by luxury, sigh over the memories of "the good old days."

*Mr. Land, the "first settler," as above mentioned, sided with the British in the American war. One night, while carrying despatches for his General, he was fired upon and struck down. He, however, succeeded in crawling on his hands and knees into the thicket, where he hid till morning. The same night the Indians burnt his cabin, and his wife and children escaping, traced his footsteps to where he had been wounded, and seeing blood, believed him to be dead, and followed the retreating army into New Brunswick. In the meantime Land, finding no trace of his family, went to "the Falls," and ultimately to the Bay. Seven years elapsed, and his wife and family left New Brunswick, and strangely decided on settling near Niagara. Hearing that a man of their name was settled near Burlington Bay, they travelled through the woods, and had the happiness of meeting with the long lost husband and father. For a long time after the arrival of Land, very few settlers arrived. Immigrants preferred the high grounds of Ancaster and Barton. The Indian grass was hard to exterminate; rattlesnakes abounded, and in the summer months mosquitoes proved a most formidable and intolerable plague, and the soil was not the best for agricultural purposes. Stoney Creek and Ancaster were places of considerable importance before Hamilton was more than a mere hamlet, yet it appears to have been a sort of rendezvous for the surrounding neighborhood. At a very early period a man named Smith built a tavern on the site of Charlton's vinegar works, corner of King and Wellington streets, and a lodge of Freemasons used to meet here as early as the year 1795. In 1796 a considerable number of settlers arrived, but the exact dates cannot be ascertained, but the following are the names of those occupying the site of Hamilton in 1812.

Abel Land occupied two hundred acres north of Barton and east of Wentworth streets. John Aikman occupied the next lot and his log house stood near the corner of Burlington and King streets. Ephraim Land owned four hundred acres east of Wellington and south of Main streets. Robert Land's farm was north of King and east of Wellington streets, and his house stood on the south-east corner of Barton and William streets. Peter Ferguson whose name is preserved in the avenue so called, owned two hundred acres east of Mary and north of King streets, his house was near the corner of Ferguson avenue and Robert streets. Nathaniel Hughson, after whom Hughson street is named, owned two hundred acres east of Mary, west of Wellington and north of King. Captain Durand owned the only farm south of Main street, his house stood on John street. A man named Barnum kept a tavern on the north-east corner of James and King streets where Hamilton's drug store now stands, he also owned a farm extending from James to Merick. Daniel Kirkendall owned a farm of two hundred acres north of King and west of Bay, his house stood above the hollow near the Great Western shops.

In 1814 William Sheldon opened the first store in the place. This was a frame building and stood on the corner of King and John streets. Black, Carpenter, Knight and Shute, were the first cabinet makers, the factory of the latter stood where White's block now is on King Street. John Aikman was the first wagon maker and Edw. Jackson the first tinsmith. Their shops stood on the south side of the gore on King street. The first foundry, a stone building owned by McQuesten and Fisher, stood near the south-east corner of the gore. John Law kept the first district school which was situated on King street. The first district school stood on the south-east corner of King and Ferguson avenue, and was occupied by Thomas Reynolds. Andrew Miller, locally known as "Yankee Miller" bought out Barnum after the war and kept the tavern for several years until it was destroyed by fire. In those times the nearest saw mill was at Big Creek in Barton. In 1813 the site of the city was laid out in town lots by George Hamilton, who was at that time and for several years after member of Parliament for Gore district. This gentleman was remarkable for his energy and public spirit and used every exertion to attract settlers to the locality but not with very great success, for in 1830 it was still a small village. The future city was named in honor of Mr. Hamilton.

In 1823 an act was passed for the construction of the "Burlington Bay Canal," uniting Burlington Bay with Lake Ontario. This work gave a great impetus to the trade and general prosperity of Hamilton; warehouses, wharves, stores and dwellings were erected—vessels were constructed, and large numbers of workmen arrived. This canal was not completed till April, 1832, and Hamilton, then became the head of navigation on Lake Ontario. The construction of Desjardins Canal, uniting Dundas with Burlington Bay, was chartered June, 1826, and for some time added materially to the prosperity of Hamilton.

In 1830 emigrants arriving here were obliged to depend upon farmers in the vicinity for the purchase of necessaries. King street did not exist in those days. Main street was the chief thoroughfare. Peter Horning was at this time Pathmaster of the village, and his premises fronting on Main street, he was frequently solicited by immigrants wanting relief and shelter. To escape their importunities in some measure he had the road now known as King street opened out as the chief street of the village.

On the 12th of February, 1833, an act was passed, on account of the great increase in the population of the town, to define its limits, and to establish a market and police and town officers therein. The town of Hamilton was incorporated in 1833. In the preceding year (Friday, Nov. 16th,) a fire destroyed "Miller's Hotel, the stores of Messrs. Ferguson & Co. and McNab, the Post-office, Desjardins' Canal office, Western Mercury office and the dwelling house and shop of Mr. Scobie, which were consumed in less than three-quarters of an hour from the first appearance of the fire."

On the 12th of July, in the same year, the cholera reached Hamilton, and several citizens fell victims to this dread destroyer, and the prisoners in the jail were all liberated.

In the year 1836 the population of the town was 2,846, and the assessed value £14,020. In 1838 the population was 3,358, and the assessed value £52,130. On the 9th of June, 1846, an act was passed incorporating Hamilton as a city, the population having increased to 6,832, and the assessed value being £113,720.

For several years previous to 1856 the progress of the city was rapid and satisfactory. In that year the population was estimated at 27,500. Then, however, came a season of depression. The young city became too ambitious; it undertook too much.

It had invested largely in railways; it built magnificent water-works; it dug expensive sewers; it erected gas works; and the burden of debt which it brought upon itself was too much for its people to bear. Years of disaster followed; property fell in value; business decayed; the population decreased. In 1861 the Government Census Commissioners found but 19,096 souls here; and three years later the City Assessors reported but about 17,000. From this state of depression, however, the city rallied nobly; business revived, manufactures sprang up, and Hamilton once more entered the race with her sister cities for supremacy in Ontario. In 1871 her population was 26,716, and to-day it is 32,300; and her trade has more than kept pace with her progress in other respects. In 1850 her total exports were valued at $352,892; in 1855 they had risen to $1,718,344. In 1870 she shipped to the United States alone goods valued at more than two millions of dollars; and the total exports for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, were $1,117,968; imports, $6,219,943; and the amount paid for duties was $651,158 90. Total value of real property, $11,225,450, and personal property, $2,670,000.

The first Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace for Gore District was held in Hamilton on the 12th of January, 1819. A bench of magistrates presided over this court, and the first was composed of James Crooks chairman, George Hamilton, Richard Beasley, Richard Huff, Daniel O'Reilly, Wm. Ellis, John Chisholm, John Secord and James McBride. The earliest sentence recorded was passed at this session upon Joseph Cole, convicted of petit larceny. The unfortunate man was kept in jail for three months, and at midday, in the town of Hamilton, was publicly whipped with forty lashes, lacking one, on the bare back and then discharged.

The first jail and Court-house were situated on the site of McKee's hotel, John street. It consisted of a lower story of logs and the upper of frame, having an area of 20x30 feet, and was admirably adapted for keeping its inmates excessively uncomfortable, possessing only seven or eight apartments for prisoners. The upper story was used as a court room, and on Sabbath as a church, alternately by the Episcopalians and Presbyterians. In 1828 the buildings now used as a court room and county offices were erected at a cost of about $30,000. About this time the first capital execution of a Hamilton assize took place. A man named Vincent, convicted of wife murder, was hanged in the jail yard.

On the 4th of March 1833 the first Board of Police was elected and consisted of Thomas Taylor, president; C. C. Ferrie, E. Stinson, J. Rolston, and P. H. Hamilton. In 1846 a police court was established, Captain George A. Armstrong magistrate. In 1856 the Recorder's Court was established presided over by Mr. J. E. Start. Thomas Beasley, City Clerk and Recorder, this court was abolished in 1868. On the 17th of March (Auspicious day) 1863, Mr. James Canill was appointed Police Magistrate, an office which he holds at the present day. The new Jail on Barton street near Ferguson avenue, was begun in 1873 and completed in 1875, at a cost of about $40,000, and Mr. John Henery who had previously worthily held the position of Chief of Police was appointed governor.

In 1847 the first Council of the City of Hamilton was elected and the following gentlemen had the honor of being its representatives; Colin C. Ferrie, Mayor; Alex. Carpenter, Charles O. Counsell, N. Ford, L. B. Freeman, D. C. Gunn, David Kelly, Andrew Miller, Samuel Mills, H. R. O'Rielly and H. B. Willson.

The city sends two members to the federal Parliament and one to the Provincial. The former at present are, Æmilius Irving, Q. C., and Mr. A. T. Wood. Mr. J. M. Williams is the local representative.

HAMILTON WATER WORKS.

William Haskins, Chief engineer.
office City Buildings.

The Hamilton Water Works were incorporated April 20th, 1836, by act of parliament, and are erected about 250 yards from Lake Ontario. These works are superior to any other in the Dominion, excepting those of Montreal. Their total cost was $800,000; and there are now (1876) upwards of fifty miles of pipe laid in the city. The machinery is complete and perfect. The power consists of two double cylinder engines of one hundred horse power each, and the supply amounts to about 800,000 gallons a day of 11 hours. The reservoir three and a half miles from the works, is 185 feet above the level of the lake. It is 25 feet deep and will contain nine millions imperial gallons. The water from lake Ontario is filtered through 31 feet of sand. The power required to force the water into the reservoir is equal to 5½ tons to the square foot on the main pipe which has an inside diameter of 18 inches and is only one inch thick
