The roof is formed of trussed beams and slated. One engine of 400 horse-power is used, together with two smaller engines of twenty horse-power each. There are six boilers, four of which are thirty feet long and thirty inches in diameter, and one forty inches in diameter. The saws are four feet in diameter, and make 1,000 revolutions per minute. The cooling bed for hot rails is formed of an inclined plane of rails laid at intervals of three feet. The large engine is a high-pressure vertical engine, with forty-two inch cylinder, three feet stroke, and makes eighty revolutions per minute; the fly-wheel is 24 feet in diameter, and weighs thirty-five tons. The small engines are horizontal, coupled to the same shaft by cranks at right angles, and their cylinders 10½ inches in diameter, with 20 inch stroke. To manufacture 4,000 tons of new rails will consume about 5,000 tons of coal. The Company employ about 150 men in the mill, and have four rail-heating furnaces, and two double puddling furnaces. The machinery for the mill, viz: engine, mill train, furnaces, and saws were manufactured for the Railway Company by Messrs. Goldie, McCulloch & Co., of the Town of Galt. Messrs. Gartshore & Son, of Dundas, manufactured the powerful shears, rail straighteners, turning lathe, &c. There is also a large steam hammer (5 tons), made by Morrison, of Newcastle, England.
