No. 10 Internment Camp, Chatham and Fingal, Ont.

Opened 15 May 1944 at Chatham as a tented camp housing approximately 326 enemy merchant seamen from Monteith (Camp 23) who were employed on farming projects in Southwestern Ontario. Some were employed in plants of Libby McNeill Company and the Canadian Dominion Sugar Company.

Camp closed 15 November 1944 and prisoners returned to Monteith. Camp re-opened 1 May 1945, moved to Fingal 1 December and closed 14 November 1946.

Camp capacity was 325 and, in 1945-1946, included some combatant officers and other ranks in addition to internees and enemy merchant seamen. Strength of camp at Fingal in April 1946 was 248, of whom 218 were merchant seamen working on farms.

No. 32 Internment Camp, Hull, Québec
(formerly Camp H)

Opened 9 August 1941 in the newly constructed provincial jail in Val Tétreau.

First occupants were 90 members of the Communist Party of Canada who were transferred from Petawawa (Camp 33) 20 August 1941 after trouble developed between them and Fascist internees at Petawawa

The Communists were released one by one after the hearing of their cases by the Advisory Committee, beginning in April 1942. All had been released by October 1942

7 anti Nazi prisoners of war at Espanola (Camp 21) and 10 from Ozada (Camp 133), all seeking protection, arrived in September 1942

Internment Camp "R", Red Rock, Ont.

Opened in July 1940 in property owned by Lake Sulphite Pulp Co. Ltd.
 1150 German internees arrived from UK
 There were 1100 internees, approximately 900 enemy merchant seamen
 Only 174 were considered anti-Nazi, 78 of whom were Jewish
 The internees included merchants and professional men, many of whom came from former German African colonies. "A number of these men are of birth, breeding, education and wealth". The merchant marine officers were "of quite superior type and largely anti-Nazi"
 Colonel Hubert Stetham recommended in December 1940 that the Jews be moved to Neys and the anti-fascists to Farnham because Red Rock was considered a pro-Nazi camp and they were the "cause of discord" (HQS 7236-12). The Jews were moved by February 1941
 13 internees transferred to Farnham (Camp 40) in January 1941, 88 more in March 1941
 17 internees (mostly EMS) transferred to Sherbrooke (Camp 42) in January 1941
 100 transferred to Monteith (Camp 23) 17 March 1941
 Approximately 900 EMS transferred to Monteith in June or July 1941
 347 internees transferred to Monteith in October 1941
 507 (mostly EMS) transferred to Seebe (Camp 130) in October 1941
 Camp closed in October 1941 because water supply was "extremely unsatisfactory".

Internment Camp "L", Cove Fields, Québec

Opened 13 July 1940 as a temporary camp to accommodate 743 internees (categories B and C) who arrived from UK aboard S.S. Ettrick.

All but 90 were, in fact, refugees and 60% were Jewish (i.e. 600 Jews, 102 others)

The remaining 90 were considered to be pro-Nazi

British Government requested that the internees be treated as refugees.

Jewish internees moved to Sherbrooke (Camp 42) in October 1940, the non-Jews to Farnham (Camp 40)

SOURCE GUIDE

INTERNMENT CAMPS IN CANADA DURING THE SECOND WORLD WAR: 1939-47.
GERMAN AND ITALIAN PRISONERS OF WAR AND CANADIAN CIVILIANS.

This guide lists the relevant sources in the Government Archives Division for the study of people who were confined in the internment camps in Canada during the second World War. The guide is limited to German and Italian prisoners of War, Canadian civilians who were interned for security reasons, and conscientious objectors. References are listed by Record Group which means they are organized by department and government agencies that were concerned with internment camps. Among them there is RG 2 Privy Council Office, RG 6 Department of Secretary of State, RG 13 Department of Justice, RG 18 RCMP, RG 24 Department of National Defence, RG 25 Department of External Affairs, RG 27 Labour, RG 76 Immigration, and finally RG 84 Parks Canada. The references in this guide are presented in two ways. Where there are blocks of files on one topic within one record group, a precise description of the files is provided. For these blocks a corresponding Finding Aid exists. For references that are Scattered throughout a Record Group only a general description is provided, which usually includes a finding aid number, a volume range and a brief description of the contents of the files.

Note: Researchers wishing to consult any of these records are advised to check the Access Control Lists before requesting files. For further information consult the Access Section or the archivist responsible for the Record Group.
