THE CITY OF LONDON, ONTARIO.

WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR THIS PUBLICATION BY W. C. BURGESS, M.D.

If antiquity is any recommendation, it must be confessed, London, like the other cities in the Dominion, entirely fails on that score. Its roots do not go back to the middle ages, nor a tithe of the distance. True, the terrestrial section on which the city stands is an ancient, we suppose, as any other portion of the planet; the sky above—the natural roof, so to speak, may be dated at an earlier period in the pre-historic ages. So that in one sense London is quite as ancient as the proudest antiquarian could desire. But artificially, that is in respect of mansions, manufactories, stores, churches, schools, banks, hotels, cottages, shanties and the like, it is undeniably modern, the procession of structures having started out of forest chaos not half a century ago. Its commencement, A. D. 1827, was very small—a diminutive log hut which was built on a spot near the corner of King and Ridout street. The owner of the little dwelling, not exceeding sixteen feet square, was Peter McGregor, a native of Scotland. Some three or four assisted at the undertaking, cutting down the trees, and forming them into a rude human habitation. Peter's shanty was designed to be a tavern, but as they had no room inside for visitors, a bottle of whiskey and a tumbler used to stand on a stump outside the door, where the thirsty were refreshed on reasonable terms. The clearance for this tavern was the first in the woods, and even when it was complete the tall trees covered it with their branches. So the city was founded, and Peter McGregor has a place henceforth on the historic page. That he anticipated the growth of a city from his humble fabric, we dare not affirm; this thing is certain, however, a city has followed it, and a better location for one could not have been found, whether the salubrity of the location is considered, or the fertility of the district by which it is encompassed. On Dundas street, and nearly opposite the centre front of the Robinson Hall, Abraham Carroll, from Oxford County, reared in the fall of the same year, 1827, famous for McGregor's operation, the second house,—a frame tavern. When nearly finished, it took fire and was reduced to ashes. But not discouraged, the proprietor, of what had been, commenced another structure on the same lot, and by next summer he had fairly commenced business. These taverns presupposed inhabitants in the neighborhood, and to account for their erection it has only to be explained that already London Township was well settled; Westminster was thickly peopled along the Commissioner's road and for two concessions back; Dorchester, Nissequoy, and Lobo, were each partially inhabited, and fresh arrivals were continually taking place. Supplanting a temporary wooden structure on the same position, the existing Court House and Jail, were erected in 1828, under the architectural superintendency of the deceased Mr. Thomas Parke, of St. Catharines. The county buildings gave an importance to the locality, and a guarantee that a considerable population would gradually cluster around them. The growth of London, however, was slow at first; it began to increase sensibly in 1828, but this became more apparent after the extensive emigration in 1832, five years after it had sprung into existence. Then there was a decent village, composed of English, Scotch, Irish and American settlers. The original Robinson Hall had made its appearance; there was a public market on the south east corner of the Court House Square; stores had been opened by the Messrs. Goodhue, O'Brien, Jennings and Lawrason; Mr. Morrill located himself on the spot in 1830, and commenced the business which he followed till a very recent date from now. The place grew with the Robinson Hall as its nucleus, though, till after the disastrous fire, some eighteen years from its origin; but very few brick buildings could be counted on its streets. In these dawning days the Post Office was kept by Major Scofield, away in the forest, in a small log house on North Street, the site of which now forms part of the Convent property, though the fabric itself but lately disappeared. There was a mail only once a week, which was carried on horseback, and the denizens had to exercise what patience they could in their outlandish situation. London was then called the "Forks," a name suggested by the union of the two branches of the Thames, on the west of the city. The country roads were dreadful, and people visited the village mostly in wagons drawn by oxen; money was scarce, and barter was the ordinary mode of traffic; a bushel of wheat for a yard of factory cotton, is a specimen of the prices. Whatever a resident or rural settler may now require can readily be obtained, but many in those semi-civilized and struggling times had to deny themselves indulgences which have come to be considered among the necessities of life. Tea was one of those indulgences. A substitute for the refreshing leaf was found in "Plains Tea," which grew on the flats, on the hillside where Eldon House stands, and up along the river side. They would travel long miles to gather the herb, and many are still alive who drank it.

In the early part of the city's history, before Public Schools were established, education was left entirely to private enterprise, and upon the whole the want was tolerably well supplied. The teachers, moreover, were not without a fair return for their labors. At an early date a Grammar School was instituted, showing that the more prosperous families were ambitious for their sons to receive something beyond an ordinary English education, so as to qualify them, if they felt inclined, for entering on a professional career. Since then public schools, conducted with great efficiency, and now attended by thousands of pupils, have come into existence, and render incalculable service to the com-
